Mediation Marathon
By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

A marathon of mediation, ntinuing almost without interption for 32 hours, resulted t night in a settlement of the ation's most serious dispute, hich was headed toward a naonal railroad strike next Sunay.

The settlement—a compromise between the 30 per cent age increases demanded by the 19 ilway brotherhoods involved and e 7½ to 13½ per cent increases commended several weeks ago by special finding board—was said to volve additional annual wage disrsements by the Nation's railads of about 300 million dollars.

The settlement figure is about 30 illion dollars in excess of the mounts originally recommended by e emergency board.

350,000 Affected

Some 1,250,000 workers will parpate in the increased wages, 1,000 of them members of the ig Five" operating brotherhoods, d the remaining 900,000 members the 14 nonoperating brotherods.

The settlement was first intiated by Chairman Wayne L ross, of the fact-finding board, ppointed by President Roosevelt. told reporters he was confident there would be no railroad ke, but added that "the proerties made it inappropriate for board" to disclose the exact ms of the settlement until they e reported to the White House. t was learned in other quarters, owever, that the board's proposal ovides for the following increases:

Nonoperating employes—an inrease of 9 cents per hour, as riginally recommended by the act-finding board, to be in effect rom September 1, 1941, to December 1, 1941, with an increase to 10 nts per hour after that date.

Operating employes—An inrease of 7½ per cent, as recomended by the fact-finding board, om September 1 to December 1, nd thereafter increasing to a flat se of 9½ cents per hour.

oth increases will be added to basic rate, it was said, and will be temporary as the board preously had recommended.

t was reported reliably that the promise provided that office, ical and telegraphic employes uld receive paid vacations of six, or twelve days respectively for two and three years service, all other nonoperating employes ld be given six-day vacations. board originally recommended all be given six-day vacations.

Fish Puts Off Grand Jury Until Friday

Committee Session Is Reason; Hill Case Goes to Goldsborough

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Pleading that he had to go to an important committee meeting, Representative Hamilton Fish yesterday put off for two days more his appearance before the special grand jury on German agents. He is now scheduled to testify Friday.

Meanwhile, the Government's efforts to obtain prompt trial of Fish's secretary, George Hill, 45, who was indicted October 24 on two perjury charges, went before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough, who will hold a District Court hearing Wednesday to set the date.

Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and Edward J. Hickey, jr., want the trial next week. Hill's lawyers want it put off until next month.

Referred to Goldsborough

The prosecutors of the Department of Justice propaganda squad, who have told the court Hill was the Washington key man of a Nazi propaganda machine, asked last week that Hill be placed on trial in the perjury case next Monday. The matter was referred to the justices of the court, who yesterday adopted a rule placing the judge presiding over Criminal Court No. 1 (the post now held by Justice Goldsborough) in control of the criminal calendar.

Fish did not go before the grand jurors when he was informally invited the first week in November. When subpenaed, he raised a point of personal privilege in the House. A week later, when the House authorized him to appear, he was on active duty with the Army and the grand jurors awaited his return. Last week Fish offered to appear whenever the House or its Foreign Affairs Committee was not in session and his appearance was set for tomorrow.

In the meantime, Fish discovered that there was another committee he wished to attend. To a request from another Fish secretary, Walter

Case Is Continued And Children Go Back To Receiving Home

John Michael Wise, 9 months old, and his brother Hudson, 23 months, left District Court in their blue snow-suits yesterday and won't have to go back any more.

Their futures rested for the moment in the hands of Justice David A. Pine. What becomes of John Michael and Hudson, Justice Pine probably will say tomorrow morning in a decision on who gets them—their father, Hudson B. Wise, 26, or his estranged wife, Mrs. Margaret Wise, 24. Each wants the children.

Continuance of the case until tomorrow was granted on request of Attorneys M. Edward Buckley, jr., and William J. Kelly, representing the father, who came here from Savannah, Ga., the Wises' home city, to work as a carpenter in the Navy Yard. Each parent has filed habeas corpus proceedings for delivery of the infants from the Children's Receiving Home. The father is at liberty in $300 bail for allegedly kidnaping John Michael and Hudson and bringing them here. The charges were brought in Savannah.

After their visit to court the infants were returned to the Receiving Home's custody, while their mother went to the home of a friend.

Leaving her babies once more, she paused outside the courtroom to say, "I want to take them back to Georgia if I can."

Wise's case is scheduled to be heard before Justice Wheat in Circuit Court December 26, during extradition proceedings. Mrs. Wise is represented by Attorney H. L. McCormick.

House Passes Retirement Bill Of Rep. Ramspeck

The Ramspeck retirement bill was unanimously passed by the House yesterday.

Provisions of the bill include optional retirement of Federal and District employes at 60 after 30 years service; at 62 after 15 years service; at 55 on reduced annuity after 30 years. Employe contributions are raised from 2½ to 5 per cent. The measure now goes to the Senate. (Further details on Page 13).

REA Accused Of Copper Hoarding

The Rural Electrification Administration was charged in the House yesterday with "hoarding" millions of pounds of copper cable in open Texas fields in the face of the national defense shortage and OPM priority efforts to reduce civilian use of the strategic metal.

Representative Thomas D. Winter (Republican), of Kansas, said the REA's Texas copper "cache" is being held for duplicating transmission lines and generating plants to be energized two years hence in an area already serviced with cheap private power.

Demanding a Congressional investigation of REA activities, Winter charged that the agency is more interested in socialization of the utility industry than in carrying electricity to the farmers and "is teeming with Communists, fellow travelers and bureaucrats."

Sabotage Charged

"REA has misstated the facts to the public and to its cooperative customers in stating that no copper is available because of the national defense emergency, when in truth in one instance alone millions of pounds of copper will lie idle for two years and then be used for transmission lines which are economically unsound," Winter told the House.

In his resolution calling for investigation by a select House committee he claimed "prima facie evidence that the national defense requirements for copper are being sabotaged either with intent or as a result of bureaucratic interests which run counter to national defense needs."

Winter said he had pictures showing several million pounds of copper "hidden away in Texas cotton fields" heavy cable of three and seven strands which will never be used to illuminate a single additional farm home."

Ground Not Broken for Plant

"It is located in the open fields at Gilmer, Quitman, Emory, Troup, Mount Pleasant and Henderson, Tex.," Winter told the House. "This job lot of copper was deposited on these fields the first week of October from a 23-car train load. The REA bought this copper to serve as a transmission line to connect up seven Texas electric cooperatives centering around Gilmer, Tex. These cooperatives are already being served with electricity."

The cache is being held for transmission lines that cannot be energized in less than two years, and for a Gilmer plant for which ground has not yet been broken, while newly formed cooperatives are unable to obtain delivery on previously ordered electric conductor wiring, for which they have already installed poles, appliances and other equipment, Winter said.

He said the only justification for the Gilmer "hoard" was an REA desire to establish a competitive plant to control rates, although the seven cooperatives around Gilmer are now receiving power from private companies at a rate of 40 per cent lower than the national average whole-

British Rout Italian Division, Stop Nazi Break-Out; Germans In Full Retreat From Rostov

Russia Reports Huge Amounts of Booty; Attacks on Moscow Front Repulsed

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Tuesday), Dec. 2.—A special Soviet communique today announced destruction of 102 Nazi planes and capture of at least 118 tanks and 210 cannon by Red army forces pursuing the fleeing Germans westward from recaptured Rostov-on-Don.

The regular communique issued a few minutes earlier said that not only were the German invaders retreating rapidly on that southern front, but that violent attacks on the Moscow central front were repulsed by the dogged Soviet defenders.

The special announcement over the Moscow radio, breathing a newly strengthened optimism, credited the Thirty-seventh Army under Maj. Gen. Lopatin with skillful blows which sealed the fate of German Field Marshal von Kleist's troops.

Furious Counterattack

Russian military dispatches portrayed Von Kleist's southern flank as already shattered, its remnants in danger of being trapped, and said hard-charging Red cavalrymen were galloping on west in the Donets Valley.

The special communique emphasized the continuing nature of the counteroffensive, which it said was still so furious that no full survey had been made of the vast booty taken, and that the figures given were merely preliminary.

Thus the Russians claimed that the northern gate to the Caucasus was re-locked, and that the Germans, suffering their worst reversal of the campaign, had lost more than a month of hard-won gains along the north shores of the Sea of Azov.

The Moscow radio reported that besides being hurled back 40 miles from Rostov to Taganrog, and forced to continue their retreat toward Mariupol, 60 miles farther west, the Germans on the Moscow front were being battered back from approaches to the capital.

Gains on Moscow Front

Russian counterattacks in this key theater of the war were said to have driven the Nazis from 35 villages, with the Russians striking fiercely at the long wedge toward Stalinogorsk, southeast of Moscow, and the spearhead in the Klin sector, northwest of the capital.

A Pravda correspondent said the Germans were hurrying reserves into the battle in both salients in an attempt to stem the Soviet surge.

Quoting dispatches to Pravda from the southern front, the Moscow radio said a second Russian counteroffensive had developed yesterday northwest of recaptured Rostov.

Sweeping back toward the industrial centers of the Donets Valley, the Russian advance threatened to open a corridor to the Sea of Azov that would cut off Kleist's hotly engaged rear guard.

Time for Statesmanship, Nomura Says

President Roosevelt yesterday assumed direct command of diplomatic and military moves relating to Japan as the lights of peace flickered low in the Orient and Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese Ambassador, told reporters that "there must be wise statesmanship to save the situation."

It was in a tense atmosphere that the President reached the White House from Warm Springs shortly before noon to receive a report from Secretary of State Hull on his conversation yesterday morning with official Japanese representatives and to confer with diplomatic, naval and personal advisers.

Washington reports indicate that Japan is massing troops in southern Indo-China for a possible military move into Thailand, which an authoritative statement made here last week indicated the United States Government could not tolerate. In Manila the leaves of United States naval and military forces have been canceled and London reports said military and air forces were being mobilized in the Netherlands East Indies.

On entering the executive mansion, the President went directly to his oval study on the second floor, there receiving jointly Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations, and Secretary Hull, who reported on his earlier talk of over an hour with Admiral Nomura and Saburo Kurusu, special Japanese envoy.

Then Harry Hopkins, the Executive's closest confidant, was driven from Naval Hospital, where he has been ill for weeks, to the White House for a luncheon conference. Finally, Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, who had just seen Viscount Halifax, the British Ambassador, was received in the late afternoon for an hour-and-a-half

'Battering Rams' Depart
By the United Press

Cairo, Dec. 1.—Italy's armored Ariete (Battering Ram) Division was reported in headlong flight from the major Libyan battlefield today with half its tanks destroyed, leaving two German panzer divisions to continue the struggle against an unyielding wedge of British imperials blocking the Axis supply line.

Frustrated in a combined attempt to crash headlong through the wedge trapping them east of the Tobruk-Rezegh line, the three Axis armored divisions separated as struck from three directions, dispatches reported.

Nazis Use Infantry

The German Fifteenth Panzer Division swung south around Rezegh accompanied by truck-borne infantrymen, turned and drove at Rezegh from the southwest.

The German Twenty-first Panzer Division, whose commander, Gen. Von Ravenstein, was captured during the weekend, struck simultaneously from the northeast. Italy's Ariete Division, holding the southern wing of the Axis line, drove north directly toward Sidi Rezegh.

This maneuver at first gained ground. The German Fifteenth recaptured Ed Duda, 4 miles west of Rezegh, on Saturday night, and was momentarily in position to drive north through the imperial army's Rezegh-Tobruk corridor, instead of having to cross it. Fierce British counterattacks drove the Germans from Ed Duda during the night, however, before they could take advantage of their gain.

Second Stopped Dead

The mechanized infantrymen accompanying the German Fifteenth drove wedges into the Rezegh defenses. British and New Zealand infantry opposed them. At last reports the battle still was raging indecisively, and a military spokesman said the extent of the German penetrations was not yet established.

(In London authoritative quarters said they had received later information that the Germans had been thrown out of the Rezegh sector.)

Meanwhile, the German Twenty-first, trying to break into the corridor from the northeast, was forced to a standstill.

The Ariete Division was forced to swing east of Rezegh, was half destroyed there, and fled north toward Gambut with British mobile columns in hot pursuit.

A detachment of Indian troops, mopping up behind the main battle sector, was reported to have cap-

18 Convicted In Socialist Workers' Trial

Guilty of Trying To Undermine Loyalty Of Armed Forces

By the Associated Press

Minneapolis, Dec. 1.—A Federal court jury acquitted all 23 defendants on charges of seditious conspiracy here tonight, but convicted 18 on charges of conspiracy to create insubordination in the armed forces of the Government. The jury recommended leniency. Among the defendants were officers and members of the Socialist Workers Party.

The five of the 23 defendants acquitted on the second count as well as the first were Miles Dunne, Kelly Postal, Ray Organ, Ray Rainbolt and Harold Swanson.

The count on which the 18 defendants were convicted provides for a possible penalty up to ten years' imprisonment.

Those convicted are:

V. R. Dunne, Harry DeBoer, Carlos Hudson, Clarence Hamel, Emil C. Hansen, Jake Cooper, Edward Palmquist, Carl Skoglund, Albert Goldman, New York attorney; James P. 'Profit Patriot' Quiz to Open Tomorrow

House Group to Air Activities of Defense Contract Brokers

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The House Military Affairs Committee tomorrow is to present—for the enlightenment of the American taxpayer—the first chapter of the story of the "defense broker," or why hundreds of thousands of the taxpayers' dollars, appropriated to stock up the arsenal of democracy, will never buy so much as a bullet for Britain.

It is the story of shrewd, uninhibited gentlemen who have reaped big profits from the Nation's defense effort, though they themselves are lacking in the equipment, either factories or capital, to produce a single item for the arsenal.

Representative Andrew J. May (Democrat), of Kentucky, committee chairman, yesterday described one of the characters unearthed by committee investigators in two months of digging through bank accounts and defense contractors' records in six Eastern and Middle Western States.

Nine months ago, said May, this man, one of a species another member of Congress branded as "profit patriots," had a bank balance of "zero." Today, May disclosed, this same man has $200,000 in the bank, makes a practice of writing checks for "cash" in sums of $2000 and $4000, boasts of never carrying less than $1000 in currency and entertains officials of manufacturing concerns at championship prize fights.

As a matter of fact, it was learned from another source, this man did

Bill Sped to Let Thai Premier's Son Enter West Point

The Administration yesterday gave gave right of way to a bill to enroll Ananta Khittasangka, 22-year-old son of the Premier of Thailand, in the United States Military Academy at West Point.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, said he will introduce the bill in the Senate as "a gesture of good neighborliness" to Thailand. Chairman May of the Military Affairs committee, who sponsored the bill in the House, called a meeting of his committee for this morning and said he hopes to pass the measure through the House today by unanimous consent "to show Thailand she has a friend."

At the Thailand legation it was said that the son of Premier Khittasangka is now enrolled in Purdue University. On only about seven previous occasions has Congress waived rules barring noncitizens from West Point.

Duce's Paper Admits 'Great Threat'; Germans Say Reds Attack in Waves

Tremendous Attack Made It 'Expedient' To Retire, Nazis Say

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Dec. 1.—Hordes of Russians are blocking the path to the Caucasus at Rostov and in attacks of extreme recklessness are striking blow on blow in a mighty effort to reach Taganrog, German military spokesmen admitted tonight.

They declared, however, that the Russians were menaced more than ever in their own capital, which the most advanced of Adolf Hitler's soldiers were declared able to see through good field glasses.

Russian troops withdrawn hastily from Iran, and others rushed thousands of miles from Siberia have been hurled upon the Germans at Rostov, the Germans said.

Wave upon wave they are delivering attacks of "great recklessness which are depleting the foe's strength at a terrific rate," said German dispatches.

But the Germans categorically denied that they had lost Taganrog, 40 miles east of Rostov, or that the Red army had been able to get near it.

The withdrawal from Rostov, it was said, was carried out in order, because of the Russians' great superiority in numbers and "the abandon with which they were used"—which made it "expedient" to retire to more favorable positions to meet the onslaught.

Nothing further was said of reprisals against Rostov for civilian sniping, which was given at first as the reason for the German retirement.

Siberian troops who passed the Moscow front on their way to fight for Rostov probably are urgently needed now to strengthen the front at their capital, Germans declared.

They gave no indication, however, of the Moscow sector in which the farthest advance had been made. Previous reports had put the Germans closest in the northwest.

Germans expressed themselves as willing to make a swap of Rostov, which they termed just another town, for Moscow, "the fountain of world bolshevism."

The high command reported another victory over the Russians incessantly attempting to break the siege bonds at Leningrad, declaring that 30 tanks, 6 of them "mammoth ones," had been captured in the latest onslaught.

The sinking of a heavy ice-breaker and the damaging of another large freighter in the waters about Kronstadt naval base by bombers also were reported along with new air attacks on Leningrad and Moscow.

The high command still had little to say of the fighting in North Africa, merely declaring that battles continued southeast of Tobruk and that British counterattacks from the south had been repulsed.

War Sidelights

Tommy Tells Of Talking With Rommel

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The British radio today broadcast the story of a British staff sergeant who returned to his own lines in Libya to recount a conversation with Gen. Erwin Rommel, commanding the German forces.

The sergeant said he and two of his "lads" were in a tent being interviewed through an interpreter when a "great big staff car dashed up and all the Jerries (Germans) jumped up as if they were on strings and started to 'Heil Hitler.'

"The red-faced fellow in the car looked like a big shot. He 'heiled Hitler,' too, and then he saw us lads and looked us over. I stood at attention and gave him his proper military respect, but I didn't salute him and he said to me—very good English he spoke—'Well, Englander, are you glad you are out of it?' and I said 'No.' I found out afterward that he was Rommel."

The sergeant, according to the broadcast, which was heard by C. B. S., said the Germans took the trio the first night to a camp which was "blown to blazes by our own guns."

Each day the three were in the midst of British attacks, during one of which, on the third day, they managed to escape.

Italian 'Rocket' Ship

Rome, Dec. 1 (AP).—A new type of propellerless Italian plane, driven by compressed air and hot exhaust gases, apparently on the rocket principle, was credited today by Stefani with a 285-mile flight.

The news agency said that Col. Mario Debernardi, a well-known test pilot, had flown the plane from Linate Airport, near Milan, to Guidonia Airport, near Rome, in 2 hours 15 minutes and 47 seconds yesterday.

Record Ocean Flight

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—A record eastward crossing of the Atlantic in 8 hours and 23 minutes was credited by the air ministry today to Capt. O. P. Jones, former Imperial Airways and British Overseas Airways flier.

The ministry's news service said Jones put his United States-built Liberator bomber down in Britain today 22 minutes ahead of the previous fastest time, shared by another Liberator and a United States-built Boeing.

Italians Warned Of Big Sacrifices Before War Is Over

By the United Press

Rome, Dec. 1.—Italy today shook up her air force command again and Benito Mussolini's newspaper, Il Popolo d'Italia, of Milan, acknowledging that Italians were worried by the situation in Libya, predicted the nation will have to face great sacrifices before the war is over.

Air Division Gen. Aldo Urbani was replaced as chief of the cabinet ministry for air by Col. Giuseppe Gasero, effective today. It was announced that Urbani will be sent to command a large unit at an unnamed zone of operations.

British Shelling Salum

On November 15, Mussolini removed Gen. Francisco Pricolo as undersecretary for air and chief of the air staff, at a time when British bombers were blasting south Italy and Sicily almost nightly, assigning him to "other duties," and putting in his place Gen. Rino Corso Fougier, former commander of North African aviation and an expert in fighting plane tactics.

Today's high command communique reported local action throughout the eastern sector of the Libyan front and clashes between advanced units in the central sector and said that the Italian Trento division had repulsed an attack by British armored units.

"Great Threat" Over Libya

It said that opposing artillery batteries were laying down heavy fire around the Salum and Tobruk areas, and that Italian and German planes had bombed and strafed British mechanized formations, railroads and other objectives in the Marsa Matruh zone, shooting down five British planes in the raids.

Mario Appelius, writing in Mussolini's Popo D'Italia of Milan, predicted that Italy's empire would be greatly expanded when the war finally ended, but he admitted that the United States probably will clash with Italy.

"To say that Italy doesn't suffer from the loss of Gondar (last Italian stronghold in East Africa) would be lying to ourselves," he said. "Similarly, a great threat which is painful hangs over Libya . . . (but) when the enemy thinks these sorrows and worries will cause weeping among Italian nationals he is making a big mistake. . . . Italy is one of those countries which is at its greatest when there are bitter adversities to be overcome. It is Italy's thankless task on all occasions to have to struggle against an enemy which has overwhelming numerical superiority and great reserves.

"Furthermore, Italy's functions in the general economy of war is also a thankless task.

"Nevertheless we will win the war and the country will gain great splendor. The nation will be compensated by security, prosperity and peace for the great sacrifices nobly endured now. This war will not only give Italy more ample imperial space and greater strategic security . . .but it will reinstate Italy's high international prestige.

"Italians have faith in Il Duce, Fascist Germans, the New Europe, the tripartite pact and civilization. If Churchill and Roosevelt can't see this they are simply blind and like blind men won't see it until they run their heads into Italian steel, which has the same temper from the Alps to Syracuse."

Ad Club to Hear Burt Sarazan

Burt M. Sarazan, publicity and advertising director of the Hecht Co., will speak on "The Case Against Advertising" at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington tomorrow.

Meeting at the Raleigh Hotel, this will be the club's final gathering of the year. Among the events scheduled for early 1942 are a commercial art and photo show January 17, 18 and 19 and a jamboree January 24.

Litvinoff Leaves Manila

Manila (Tuesday), Dec. 2 (AP).—Maxim Litvinoff, Russia's new Ambassador to the United States, left today by clipper plane en route to Washington, D. C. Litvinoff flew to Manila Sunday from Singapore.

Reich Now Faces Its Last Chance, Goebbels Says

Berlin, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Propaganda Minister Goebbels said today that Germany now faces its greatest "but also its last" chance and that all present cares and troubles would pale before the inferno which would await us if we lost" the war.

United States aid to Britain has lost its terror for Germany but, Goebbels said, he is not one of those dreamers who prophesy the immediate collapse of the British Empire—"good things must take their time."

"We know only too well what heavy sacrifices war demands from almost all of us," Goebbels said in referring to Germany's "last chance" during a speech before the German Academy at the University of Berlin.

"But are not sacrifices which defeated nations must bear, even if they now live outside the war, incomparably greater than our own? . . . The Axis Powers are fighting valiantly for their own elementary existence."

U. S.-Owned Ship Missing, Believed Torpedo's Victim

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The United States Maritime Commission freighter Macbeth, flying the Panamanian flag, is missing in the North Atlantic and unofficial reports said today that she had been torpedoed.

One report said the Macbeth, formerly the 4935-ton Italian ship Ida Z. O., had been towed into a Canadian port.

No official news was available.

Responsible shipping men said: "Something has happened to her, but we don't know what."

The freighter, operated by the United States Lines, which chartered her from the Maritime Commission, was engaged in ferrying American supplies to England.

The Government seized her at Mobile, Ala., last March 30.

Jury Dismisses Brutality Charge Against Officers

Two Third Precinct policemen yesterday were declared innocent of alleged brutality to a group of Negroes when a Criminal Court jury returned a verdict of not guilty on six assault charges brought against them.

The two officers, Henry J. Martin and James E. Stabler, had been under suspension for more than a year, following accusations that they had beaten a number of persons in the vicinity of Snows Court on Labor Day night, 1940.

Both men were previously tried on a simple assault count last March, at which time Stabler was acquitted and Martin found guilty. Martin was held on $1000 bond and has an appeal of the verdict pending. They were represented by James K. Hughes, Vincent Martino and Michael J. Lane.

The President's Day

By International News Service

CANCELED BY MARS: Back from a short-circuited holiday in Warm Springs came the President at 11:15 a. m. yesterday, and with a motorcycle escort clearing the way the drive to the White House was purposely swift. The President had some tall thinking and deciding to go.

THUNDER ACROSS THE WAY: When the President checked into the White House study, Secretary of State Hull was winding up his final conference with the Japanese envoys, Nomura and Kurusu. Wasting no time, the diplomatic chief hurried over to the White House at the Presidential summons. Unknown to observers, a third party joined the conference—significantly Admiral Harold Stark, chief of naval operations.

A. W. O. L.: Hospitalized Harry Hopkins escaped shortly after noon from the Navy Medical Center, bee-lined for home and lunch with his host of many months standing, Mr. Roosevelt. After a lengthy lunch and much talk, Harry was put into an executive limousine, returned to the hospital.

CRISIS: As the Japanese situation rushed toward a showdown crisis and both U. S. and the Nipponese stood their ground, the President conferred by phone with State Department, Army, Navy and other officials, read reams of hot-off-the-wire reports. Mid-afternoon he summoned Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, who, on orders, hastily huddled with British Ambassador Lord Halifax and later reported at the executive offices.

MAN'S BEST FRIEND: The President's best friend, cheerful bouncy Fala, wore the only happy expression around the White House yesterday, got himself into trouble by breaking up Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference, bringing a dead mouse into the house for the master's inspection. Unlike the other members of the house, Fala laughed off his woes, scampered noisily up and down stairs, in and out of rooms, delighted at being home again.

British Rout Italians, Smash Nazi Break-Out Thrust

tured Libyan Omar Sunday night, taking 400 German prisoners and an unspecified number of Italians.

In the general confusion of rapid movement, prisoners were changing hands three or four times in the course of a few hours.

The corridor formed by the junction of the Tobruk garrison with New Zealand troops striking up from the south was reported intact.

Today's communique said the campaign "has now resolved itself into three main areas," listing them as the one "southeast of Tobruk," where the crucial battle is under way; one along the Egyptian-Libyan frontier, where Axis forces still hold a strip from Halfaya Pass to north of Sidi Omar, and a third one deep in the desert, where a mobile Indian column has been mopping up Italian outposts in the Gialo Oasis.

A Royal Air Force spokesman said 176 Axis planes had been destroyed since the offensive started 13 days ago—92 in combat, 84 on the ground—and today's communique subsequently reported another 18 Axis planes shot down yesterday, making the total 194 in less than two weeks. All day yesterday, a communique said, British planes bombed and strafed Axis troops and supply concentrations in the main battle sector, from Ed Duda to El Adem.

One flier back from the forward area said the R. A. F. had wreaked "millions of dollars damage" among Axis mechanized forces and that he had seen "tangled and twisted wrecks from some panzer regiment covering 3 miles of desert."

Streamlined Gun Will Aid Defense Of Coastal Areas

The Army yesterday announced plans for strengthening the defenses of continental United States and its island outposts with new "streamlined" 6-inch guns.

The gun is "very accurate" and its 100-pound projectiles "can disable or sink, at long range, light or medium class warships," officials said.

They will be located at coastal forts and on the Atlantic and Pacific outlying bases, probably including the Philippines as well as Hawaii, it was indicated.

Japan to Continue Talks With U. S.

Cabinet Gives No Hint of Abandoning Expansionist Policy

By the Associated Press

Tokyo, Dec. 1.—Without a hint of budging from its expansionist policy, the Japanese cabinet decided today to continue efforts toward a settlement with the United States rather than break off Washington talks at this time.

United States-Japanese peace in the Pacific seemed to hang by that slender thread.

Meanwhile, the Japanese press voiced increasing concern over British military preparations in Burma and Malaya and over the position of Thailand, stressing one rumor that 50,000 Australian troops were ready for invasion of Thailand and that Bangkok was considering abandonment of neutrality.

For a tense hour and a quarter, in the official residence of Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, the leaders of Japan consulted on the course of the Washington conversations.

At the end of their special session, in which they heard Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo's outline of the Washington situation, the authoritative Japanese news agency, Domei, announced the decision to continue negotiations with the United States despite the divergence in views of the two governments.

Togo made clear the differences between the two governments (presumably referring to Secretary Hull's statement of basic principles). However, Domei went on:

"Japan probably will redouble efforts to make the United States reconsider Pacific problems by continuing negotiations, it is understood."

Special military examinations of current graduates to find officer material began this morning throughout Japan with the youths, wearing their black student uniforms, streaming to their designated stations all day.

The examinations of the students, who by imperial ordinance will graduate this month instead of next March, are expected to be completed by December 18.

Philippine Force on Alert

Manila, Dec. 1 (AP).—United States Army and naval forces in the Philippines were held on the alert today amid reports that Japan was pouring new troops into French Indo-China for a thrust either at southwestern China or Thailand.

Colonial Air Arm Mobilized

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 1 (AP).—The air arm of the Dutch colonial army was ordered mobilized today "to render completely ready the military air force which must be able to fight in the front lines."

The Dutch Java-China-Japan Shipping Line announced suspension of its services to Shanghai and Japan, thus cutting off direct sea communication.

The liner Fuji Maru, which had been called by the Japanese consul "the last opportunity for large scale Japanese evacuation," sailed for the homeland with more than 1000 of Japan's subjects.

Hongkong Garrison Ready

Hongkong, Dec. 1 (AP).—With the garrison of this British crown colony of the South China coast in "an advanced state of preparedness," virtually all remaining Japanese were reported today to be packing for departure to Canton by steamer tomorrow.

Volunteers Called Up

Singapore, Dec. 1 (AP).—The British government in Malaya today called up volunteers for military service under the current state of emergency.

Fritz Wiedemann in Nanking

Shanghai, Dec. 1 (AP).—Capt. Fritz Wiedemann, once one of Adolf Hitler's intimates, former consul general at San Francisco and now consul general at Tientsin, arrived at Nanking today for an unexplained conference with leaders of the Japanese-dominated Chinese government there.

At the same time it was learned that Ernst Wendler, German minister to Thailand had come to Shanghai by plane from Bangkok, on a mission likewise obscure, although he was expected to confer with Wiedemann and Christian Zinsser, acting German consul general here.

With a Tub

U. S. Soldiers 'Clean Up' In Iceland

Rest content, mother, your boy in Iceland can have his bath every Saturday night now. The plumbing may be a bit primitive and it costs him half a dollar, but he gets a nice hot bath in the Iceland Force's first bathtub.

It's all been made possible by the ingenuity of four young soldiers of the American contingent there, who seized upon a bottleneck in the Army washing facilities to establish a well-paying business.

According to a letter written by one of the four, the son of a ranking officer of the Army Air Force, to a brother stationed here at the War Department, baths were quite a problem among the Iceland troops until their "tonsorial parlor" was set up.

Water for bathing has to be hauled about 500 yards and then the soldiers can heat only a small amount at a time on the stoves they have, he reports.

"Several weeks ago," the soldier writes, "Pete, two other fellows and I took a lot of five-gallon kerosene cans, split them open, soldered them together, enclosed the finished product in a wooden case. Result: The only bathtub in the Iceland Force."

One of the builders of the tub is a very good barber, so the signs they hung out say, among other things:

"For health's sake, take a bath at least once a week in clean, modern surroundings. Enjoy the homelike atmosphere.

"Hot baths in clean metal tub. Water furnished—50 cents. Water furnished by bather, 25 cents. Tub is rinsed and scoured after each bath. Soap and towels are not furnished. Hair cuts, 35 cents. Tonic, 15 cents. Shampoo, 25 cents."

U. S. Air Chief Reports Nazis Fired on Him

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 1.—Maj. Gen. George H. Brett, chief of the United States Army Air Corps, disclosed at a press conference today that his plane was fired upon by Axis destroyers as he was flying across the Mediterranean on a trip from London and announced that a huge American maintenance and supply depot for American-made planes would be established in the Middle East.

A technical school, with United States Army Air Force majors and American factory representatives as instructors, also has been established to give British maintenance men an intensive course in maintenance of United States-built aircraft, he said.

A large civilian force will come to establish the depot for the servicing of all American-made planes operated by the British here, he said. It will be operated by the United States Government.

The school is in charge of Brig. Gen. Adler.

Brett said his plane, an R. A. F. craft, was flying from Malta to Cairo when the destroyers opened fire, but that the gunners were wide of their mark.

The pilot dipped close to the water to keep clear of the shells however.

Expressing satisfaction with deliveries of United States planes to the British forces here, he said he probably would visit the Libyan front and then try to get home by Christmas. He has flown 19,000 miles since leaving the United States in October and expects to fly 11,000 more, he said.

The maintenance school would graduate some of its students in 6 weeks and others in 12, he said, and it was hoped eventually to turn out 100 graduates every fortnight.

Aviation Sergeants Get Pay Boost

There was good news for 1400 Army Air Force sergeants in War Department orders issued yesterday—glad tidings in the form of promotion and higher pay.

Four hundred technical sergeants were advanced to master sergeant, a promotion carrying an additional $42 a month pay, while 1000 staff sergeants and first sergeants were raised to technical sergeant. The latter promotion means $12 more each month.

'Dry Guillotine' Author Sentenced to 15 Months

Brownsville, Tex., Dec. 1 (AP).—Rene Belbenoit, French fugitive from Devil's Island and author of "Dry Guillotine," was sentenced today to 15 months in prison and deportation after pleading guilty to returning to the United States illegally.

Belbenoit was charged with swimming the Rio Grande near here May 24, 1941, after having been deported from the United States in 1940. He has been under bond while lecturing in California. He returned here voluntarily Saturday.

British Cruiser Sinks Nazi Raider in South Atlantic

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 1.—The British heavy cruiser Devonshire, a 9850-which immensely broaden her area of patrol, has attacked and sunk an armed German merchant raider in the South Atlantic, the admiralty announced today.

The action, occurring on November 22, was not specifically located. The German, a fueling ship for submarines, was sighted at dawn patrol by one of the Devonshire's planes, and near her lay a boat containing oil drums.

The Devonshire signaled, got no satisfactory reply, and the German ship threw out a smoke screen. It did her no good. In ten minutes she was afire and her crew took to the lifeboats. Her magazine exploded and she went down.

Because a U-boat was aprowl, it was said, no effort to pick up survivors could be made.

Unexplained by the habitually reticent admiralty was the most curious feature of the incident: The presence in one of the raider's small boats of the unloaded drums.

This fuel, it was said in informed quarters, obviously was intended to supply the submarine. The puzzle was why such an awkward method should have been selected over the customary practice of pumping direct from the refueling ship.

There had been in recent months no other confirmed reports of the presence of surface raiders in the South Atlantic.

American Women To Fly to Britain For War Study

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt announced yesterday that Miss Eloise Davison, assistant director of the Office of Civilian Defense, will head the delegation of American women who will fly to England late this month to study women's participation in the war and to observe the effects of the war on the average citizens of Britain.

Representatives of 14 associations are being selected by their members to make the trip in response to an invitation extended by the British committee of representative women through Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, wife of the American Ambassador to the governments in exile, with whom the suggestion is said to have originated.

Mrs. Roosevelt also announced she had requested Nelson Rockefeller, coordinator of inter-American affairs, to designate Miss Mary Winslow adviser on inter-American affairs, to arrange for civilian defense data to be placed in the hands of Latin American nations in accordance with a request from the Inter-American Commission of Women.

R.A.F. Renews Heavy Raiding On Nazi Ports

By the Associated Press

London, Dec. 1.—Hamburg and five other northwest German port cities were pounded by moonlight last night in a renewal of heavy R. A. F. raiding over Germany after nearly a month's letup because of bad weather.

German raiders attacked a southwest English coastal town tonight, killing one and wounding several.

The night's raids over Germany, which had slackened since early November, when 37 British bombers were lost in a single stormy night, were admitted by the air ministy to have cost 20 planes.

There were also attacks on German supply ships off the Dutch coast, with United States-built Hudson bombes of the Canadian air force, one of which was piloted by an American, figuring largely in the raids, the air ministry's account said.

The American was Pilot Officer W. B. Cooper, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who said he bombed a small ship off Borkum, but was unable to tell whether he had sunk it. The ship was one of at least six reported attacked by the Hudsons.

Hits on a tanker and several medium-sized supply ships, one of which was left sinking wee claimed.

In the eighty-fourth attack on Hamburg, the ministry said, 150 tons of explosives were dropped and large fires were reported. In Emden, Bemerhaven, Wilhelmshaven, Kiel and Lubeck, powerful results were claimed from the other bombings.

Lone 'Vive' Cheers Petain After His Return To Vichy From Conference With Goering

By the Associated Press

Vichy, Dec. 1.—Marshal Petain held a long collaboration talk with Reichsmarshal Herman Wilhelm Goering today near St. Florentin, in occupied France, and upon his return here tonight only a solitary cry of "Vive Petain!" greeted him at the heavily guarded railway station.

The conference, 80 miles southeast of Paris, was described officially as "a long conversation on questions of interest to France and Germany," and it came amid indications of closer collaboration between conqueror and vanquished.

Jacques Benoist-Mechin, Vichy secretary of state, declared in Paris that the meeeting represented the "marked will of the French government to engage itself even more constantly on a path of [illegible] and fruitful European cooperation."

Authorized circles asserted today's talks marked the beginning of new "detailed conversations."

The full range of German-French problems were reported discussed as well as those concerning France and the "new Europe."

The talks lasted so long that Petain and Goering did not enter the Reichsmarshal's dining car for lunch until 4:30 p. m. Others in the official party waited for them.

The luncheon group included Gen. Hanesse Bodenschatz, Col. Schmidt and Col. Gallan, who boasts 95 air victories for the German air force, all from Goering's party, and Maj. Bonhomme, Commander Fontaine and Fernand de Brinon, Vicy envoy in Paris, representing the French.

De Brinon said the luncheon was "very cordial and the two marshals very gay."

Petain and Vice Premier Darlan left here last night by train without knowing their destination until sealed German orders were handed them at the demarcation line.

On their return, the crowd was silent save for the one thin cry of welcome to the old hero of Verdun.

Benoist-Mechin predicted today would be remembered "as an important date by all who see in these repeated contacts the pursuit of a political line which seeks to establish broader and more confident relations between the two powers."

'No Consequences' Expected Immediately

Vichy, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—"Acts, not words," will keynote Franco-German collaboration henceforth, an official spokesman said tonight in commenting on the meeting of Marshal Petain and Reichsmarshal Goering.

He said "no immediate consequences" were to be expected from the "long conversation concerning the affairs interesting to France and Germany."

Two Girls and Father Killed as Home Burns

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—A father and his two small daughters burned to death tonight in a fire which swept their East Baltimore home. Police identified the dead as John Kapelanczyk, 38; Lorraine, 14, and Patricia, 10.

Kapelanczyk's body was found on the first floor, and the bodies of his daughters in their beds upstairs.

Roosevelt Takes Command in Pacific Crisis

discussion with the President.

Although diplomatic conversations with the Japanese officials were renewed, authoritative circles reported that there seemed few grounds for optimism regarding the outcome of the negotiations and that a Japanese move into Thailand—whether it took the form of an invasion or of obtaining concessions through the threat of force would not be tolerated.

Thoughts here seemed to be running more along naval and military than diplomatic lines even though a formal reply from Japan to Secretary Hull's undisclosed proposals for settlement of Far Eastern problems had not yet been received. Belligerent statements made in the past several days by Gen. Hideki Tojo, Japan's premier, appear to have diminished greatly whatever degree of hope existed in official Washington that Japanese-American negotiations for peace would bear fruit.

Military sources explained privately that while Japan can move some forces in Thailand by land from Indo-China, it must maintain and provision them by sea. The American Navy is the only force now in the Pacific capable of blocking this, although British forces from Singapore could check the Japanese by land and air. The inclusion of Admiral Stark, ranking American naval officer, and of no other official in yesterday's conference with Secretary Hull, was regarded as significant in diplomatic circles.

Last week's authoritative statement on the United States Government's attitude appeared to leave no doubt that this country was prepared to meet with force any Japanese step-by-step attempt to cut off shipment to this country of essential defense materials like tin and rubber and make of the waters about east Asia a Japanese lake.

[The Navy Hydrographic Office here disclosed yesterday that Russia has barred all foreign ships from a large section of the sea approaches to Vladivostok. A "notice to mariners" stated that the Soviets had established a "prohibited area" on the eastern side of Usuri Bay in Siberia.—Editor's Note.]

A State Department spokesman made the only official American statement on the Secretary of State's conference with Admiral Nomura and Kurusu.

"The reply to the document which was handed to the Japanese representatives some days ago has not yet arrived but is expected soon," it was said. "In the meantime, there were discussed some subordinate phases of the matter pending."

The Japanese envoys entered this conference smiling and seemingly happier than for some days but they departed grimly. Although they were talkative on arrival, they merely echoed, on leaving the State Department view that "some subordinate phases" of the situation had been reviewed.

Before he saw Hull, who had conferred a few moments earlier with Dr. Stanley Hornbeck and Maxwell Hamilton, his principal Far Eastern affairs advisers, Kurusu said there would be a further conversation "if I'm instructed to that effect." A moment later, however, he remarked that he "expected to continue the talks."

The special envoy talked with reporters somewhat freely for the first time, declaring that Premier Tojo was "badly misquoted" in news dispatches sent from Tokyo Saturday which alleged that the premier had declared Britain and the United States must be "purged" from the Far East.

"He only made a broadcast for ten minutes," Kurusu said. "I've sent for the text."

Hugh G. Grant, who recently resigned as American Minister to Thailand, declared today that "if the Japanese really want war, now is the time to let them have it."

"I believe," he said, "we could smash them within a period of a few months with our superior air and naval forces."

840 Men in 29th Seeking Release Given Furloughs Until Dec. 15

2000 Seek to Return To Civilian Life Under Age Provision

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Morven, N. C., Dec. 1.—So far, 840 soldiers of the Twenty-ninth Infantry Division who have applied for release from Federal service as being 28 years old have been granted furloughs until December 15.

They are among 2000 men who have applied for release under the age provision. The division's 28-year-old quota is 2200, while the allotment for "undue hardships" is 1300. Of the latter quota about 600 have been released.

Division staff officers pointed out that men released under the age or undue hardship provisions are not discharged. Those who were drafted revert to reserve status and are subject to call at any time. Those who enlisted in the National Guard for three years go back to State control and remain members of the National Guard of the United States for the bulance of a three-year enlistment, subject to induction into Federal service at any time. Men who enlisted in the National Guard for one year will be discharged at the end of the year, but will be amenable to draft if needed.

Plans are being made to release all men who have applied and are eligible by December 18, including those who have been furloughed. Detachments from the division adjutant general's office and the 104th Medical Regiment will go to Meade in the next few days to prepare to give physical examinations and complete paper work in time to permit discharge of all eligible applicants by the date established.

The plans and training section of division staff was busy tonight preparing a march schedule for the return trip. While the program is not complete, it is expected each day's march will begin early in order to reach bivouacs before dark. Only one of the two march columns will pass through Washington, the other going by the Morgantown Bridge. The route through Washington will be selected by Metropolitan police.

Army to Set Up Schools On Hill Reservation

Wadesboro, N. C., Dec. 1.—An extensive system of schools will be established at A. P. Hill Military Reservation under supervision of Second Army Corps shortly after January 1, it was learned today.

To accommodate these schools, many permanent and semipermanent buildings will be erected at the reservation in addition to tents for quarters. Needs in training revealed by two months of field maneuvers just completed will govern the types of schools to be conducted.

Among these will be schools for small units, such as squads and platoons, and for small unit leaders. A motor maintenance school to give mechanics training in repairing vehicles in the field will be established. Officers and men charged with maintaining communications in the field by radio and telephone will receive intensive instruction in this phase of operations.

Attending these schools will be personnel from the three divisions in Second Corps, the Twenty-eighth, Twenty-ninth and Forty-fourth, and of corps troops

Meade to Get School System

Morven, N. C., Dec. 1.—Maj. Ralph S. Childs, of Washington, and Lieut. Col. Edgar T. Fell, of Baltimore, will leave here tomorrow for Fort Benning, Ga., to study methods in use at the infantry school prior to establishing schools for the Twenty-ninth Division at Fort George G. Meade, Md. Maj. Childs is from the 176th Infantry and Col. Fell is from the 175th Infantry.

Upon their return to Meade soon after the holidays they will set up a system of schools for reviewing training of small units and small unit leaders within the division.

Police Investigating Woman's Abduction

Detectives Herbert Wannamaker and Richard Felber last night investigated the abduction and rape Saturday of a 35-year-old Washington mother, who was "much improved" at George Washington University Hospital.

The woman told police of being grabbed on H Street, Near Sixth Street Northwest. After striking her over the head, two men took her in a car to a farmhouse near Glen Echo, where she was kept overnight.

Army Chiefs Give Oath to Each Other

Two ranking Army officers assumed new posts in the War Department high comand yesterday and pulled the unusual stunt of swearing in each other.

Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion, who has been judge advocate general of the Army for the past four years, gave the oath to his successor, Col. Myron C. Cramer. Cramer, who thereupon became a major general, immediately proceeded to swear in Gen. Gullion as Army provost marshal general, without either of them lowering their hands.

The ceremony was witnessed by two former Army judge advocate generals, Maj. Gen. Blanton Winship, former Governor of Puerto Rico, and Maj. Gen. Arthur Brown.

Defense Output Office Suggested

Establishment of a "general headquarters for defense production" under a board subordinate to the President providing equal representation for industry and labor was urged yesterday by Robert J. Watt, international representative of the A. F. of L., speaking before a special convention of United Textile Workers at Hotel Hamilton.

The "overall group" proposed by Watt would have authority to "mobilize defense production, using the machinery of Government, labor, and industry to carry out the polices."

Representative John E. Fogarty (Democrat) Rhode Island, and George Googe, Southern representative of the A. F. L., also spoke.

Sugar Control Law Extended

By the Associated Press

The House voted yesterday to extend sugar control legislation three years to December 31, 1944, with amendments that would increase mainland cane and domestic beet sugar quotas and increase basic benefit payments.

Operating under a rules suspension procedure that required two-thirds majority for passage, supporters of the measure carried it by a 134-to-32 vote, in the face of State Department opposition.

The State Department letter, signed by Secretary Hull and transmitted several days ago to Chairman Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, of the House Rules Committee, declared the department was "strongly of the opinion that any proposed legislation which would worsen the position of sugar producers in the off-shore areas should be subject to the same careful scrutiny to which legislation now in effect was subjected prior to its enactment."

"Legislation such as that proposed," Hull's letter said, "would be particularly inappropriate at the present time, when the need for the closest possible cooperation between the nations of this hemisphere is of such crucial importance."

Despite that communication, one from President Roosevelt explaining why the Administration had not recommended new sugar legislation, and another from Secretary of Agriculture Wickard pointing out that the House Agriculture Committee had not held hearings on the bill prior to reporting it favorably, the measure passed.

Opponents complained that today's procedure constituted a "gag rule," because the 40 minutes it allowed for debate was inadequate for presentation of their case. The House Rules Committee Friday approved a rule allowing three hours of debate on the measure.

The bill now goes to the Senate, where an identical companion measure was introduced November 7—the day the House bill was submitted by Chairman Fulmer (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the House Agriculture Committee.

REA Charged With Hoarding Copper Cable

sale rate to REA cooperatives from private sources, and "cheaper than TVA is selling to its own co-ops."

"While OPM wrings its hands for copper, while the Navy launches ships deficient of copper, while the War Department is begging for copper wiring for shell binding, and while many small business concerns are forced to cease operations because they cannot get copper, REA like a dog in the manger, hoards its copper on vacant fields in Texas," Winter said.

"Fired But One Barrel"

The Kansas Republican said he "fired but one barrel" in his Gilmer transmission line charge and if he is granted a Congressional investigation he will cite "chapter and verse instances where the REA has sabotaged national defense by improper use of copper while at the same time depriving the farmers of sorely needed copper for the energizing of farm distribution lines."

Winter's resolution called for a select committee, comprising three members each from the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce and Military Affairs committees, to investigate REA.

"I say to you that the Rural Electrification Administration is teeming with Communists, fellow travelers and beaucrats who put political theory above the safety of our country," Winter said.

"Spotting in key positions, after the Raushenbush plan of boring from within like termites, there are no less than 34 known Communists and fellow travelers in the REA here in Washington who draw a grand total in salaries of $115,720 a year. Supported by the powerful farm vote they are capitalizing on a popular cause—electrification of the farm—to seize control of a large segment of our economic and political life. The records of the Dies Committee will support me in this charge."

House Asked To Have Pegler Explain Epithets

Representative Hoffman (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday took the House floor on a question of personal privilege to call the attention of the chamber to a recent column by Westbrook Pegler appearing in The Washington Post.

The column called Congress a "miserable, fumbling, timid aggregation of political trimmers and panhandlers" that "is afraid to pass any law that would place decent restraints" on labor organizations.

Hoffman asked the House what it intended to do about the charges as he offered a resolution to have Pegler explain them before the Labor Committee. "Oh, we can lick Mr. Hitler, all right, but he's 2000 miles away," he said. "But Mr. Pegler's right here at home."

Remarking that "I may not agree with a word Mr. Pegler says, but I defend his right to say it," Majority Leader McCormack moved that the Hoffman resolution be referred to the Judiciary Committee.

Reference to the committee was approved by voice vote.

District WPA Will Release 150 From Rolls

Some 150 persons will be dropped from District WPA rolls December 9, it was learned last night.

The local quota of eligible workers for this month was set at 4500 by the Federal WPA, it was announced. The quota for November was 4650.

Spokesmen for the District agency indicated that the cut may affect up to 200 men and women. They emphasized, however, that all reductions in personnel would be made on nondefense projects.

Layoffs—mandatory under the Federal edict—will be distributed between Gallinger Hospital, Blue Plains, the Health Department, sewing room and arts and writers projects, according to reports from the office of Ross Haworth, local WPA director.

Copper Wire Lies Idle

Guilty in Socialist Workers' Trial

Max Gelman, Farrell Dobbs and Carl Kuehn.

Goldman, who participated in the trial as counsel for himself as well as others, issued a statement after the verdict terming the case a "frame-up" and assailing Daniel Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters; President Roosevelt and Acting Attorney General Francis Biddle.

"The Government," he said, "has succeeded in winning a verdict of guilty against 18 of the members of the Socialist Workers Party. That does not in the least prove that they are guilty of charges leveled against them by the Government. It still remains a fact that the conspirators are Dan Tobin, President Roosevelt and Attorney General Biddle who have initiated this frame-up for the purpose of violating the will of the truck drivers of Minneapolis and of stilling the voice of the revolutionary opposition to the second World War."

It was admitted that the S. W. P. is a revolutionary party which "predicts" the overthrow of capitalism and establishment of a workers' state. Witnesses denied, however, that the party planned to invoke armed force, explaining the party theory was that after workers came to power by majority means, the displaced capitalist minority would resist, probably bringing on a civil war. They cited the Spanish Civil War as an example.

Fish Puts Off Jury Appearance

L. Reynolds, Grand Jury Foreman John S. Gorrell yesterday sent this reply:

"Dear Mr. Fish:

"Mr. Maloney, special assistant to the Attorney General, has communicated to me your telephonic request that your appearance before the Federal grand jury for the District of Columbia be postponed.

"We are informed that your request for a postponement is based upon the fact that your presence is required at an important Congressional committee meeting scheduled to be held on Wednesday morning.

"It is the desire of the grand jury that your appearance before it shall in no way conflict with your duties and obligations as a member of the House of Representatives. For that reason your request for a postponement of your appearance as a witness before the grand jury from December 3 to December 5 is granted."

Hill was indicted after he is alleged to have told the grand jury under oath that he did not know George Sylvester Viereck, ace Nazi propagandist, and that he did not arrange for mailbags taken from the headquarters of an alleged agent of Viereck's to be stored in a room on Capitol Hill used by Fish.

Since Justice Goldsborough served nearly 20 years in Congress with Hill's employer, Fish, and 18 years with his lawyer, former Representative John O'Connor, it was conjectured by courthouse attaches that he would assign the Hill trial to Justice James W. Morris, Justice Jesse C. Adkins or Federal Judge Leroy Adair, of Illinois, here on "loan" duty.

Laymen's Forum Speaker Links Morals to Aims

"A person's standard of morality is determined by his goal in life, the Laymen's Forum was told last night at a meeting in the Willard Hotel. The speaker, the Rev. Dr. C. I. Litzinger, O. P. professor of moral theology at the Dominican House of Studies, said:

"The rising young businessman whose sole aim is to amass wealth will follow a moral criterion justifying as good any transaction that brings profit . . . as bad all deals which are financial failures."

Investigation of Defense Contract Brokers Will Open

have a bank balance before he went into the business of dealing in defense contracts. The balance was exactly $1.25.

As May's investigators arranged photostatic copies of canceled checks, letters and other documents for presentation at public hearings scheduled to start tomorrow morning, two other Congressional committees pressed forward on similar inquiries and Representative Jones (Republican), of Ohio, introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the Democratic National Press, a publication for which, he charged, advertisements are solicited from defense contractors.

Representative Otis S. Bland (Democrat), of Virginia, announced on the House floor that the Merchant Marine and Fisheries Committee, of which he is chairman, intends to make its own investigation of defense brokers.

Bland said he has become concerned over "constant reports" of the presence in Washington hotel lobbies and in the corridors of Federal agencies of a small army of individuals who represent themselves to businessmen seeking defense contracts as persons in such good standing with defense officials that the matter of securing contracts can be made very simple—for a fee.

Bland's committee has been authorized by the House to investigate conduct of the defense program as far as the Maritime Commission is concerned. He said the investigation, if any, will be confined to participation of brokers in commission contracts. The committee, he declared, will meet tomorrow to "explore" the situation.

"My own opinion is that any meritorious claim will be considered by the commission without the intervention of a third party," Bland stated. "However, I don't like these reports. If there is anything to them, we want to know it."

May disclosed that Undersecretary of War Robert Patterson had asked to be permitted to testify before the Military Affairs Committee. He intimated that before the inquiry was finished, other officials and some persons who formerly held top Government jobs and were highly placed in Administration circles, might also be heard.

The intimation was given when May was asked if the committee contemplated calling Charles West, former Representative from Ohio and former Undersecretary of the Interior, and Thomas G. Corcoran, former assistant general counsel of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and confidant of President Roosevelt.

West recently filed suit in New York for $687,000, due him, he said, as "business consultant and adviser" of the Empire Ordnance Co. West claimed he was engaged with the understanding that he would receive 1 per cent of the gross sales made by the company following his employmnt. He said he was advanced $13,000 and the company got 70 million dollars in defense orders. His suit was for the balance allegedly due him.

Corcoran reportedly has served as a representative of several concerns.

The files of the May Committee, it was learned, concern chiefly the operations of "middle-men" or "brokers" in industrial centers of the East and Middlewest who make contract arrangements between "prime" contractors and subcontractors on defense production.

The broker collects two and, sometimes, three commissoins and has been known to make a fourth profit in the form of a price differential. The broker, who seldom has financial backing or investments, may arrange for a manufacturer to take a subcontract at a certain price, but the defense article may be made by a second subcontractor at a price lower than that at which the first subcontractor was to have been paid.

Ultimately, brokers' profits are paid from Federal defense appropriations.

Jones displayed on the House floor the "inaugural (first) edition" of the Democratic National Press, whose managing editor is Jay Gladwin, with an office in the Shoreham Building. The publication contained numerous advertisements of taverns and a few ads from manufacturers, the majority of whose plants are located in Detroit and vicinity.

Jones said the publication's advertising "may be characterized as from beer to battleships and its technique would make Al Capone blush with envy."

"Anybody who can get $300 a page for advertising in this rag with a circulation of 2000 has something on the ball," he declared. "As a matter of fact, Jay Gladwin does have ideas that pay. How does he get advertisers? Ask the defense contractors. Curiously enough, when a company gets a contract to supply the arsenal of democracy it will probably get this form letter."

Jones then read one of the letters, signed by Gladwin.

Sen. Adams Dies; Rites in Colorado

Overwork Hastens Death of Ardent Advocate of Economy

The body of Senator Alva B. Adams, 66, of Colorado, will be taken to Pueblo, his home city, aboard a Congressional train leaving Washington at 6:30 p. m. today.

A front-rank advocate of Government economy, a Democrat and champion of Western legislation, Senator Adams died early yesterday in his Wardman Park Hotel apartment of a heart disorder, resulting partly, it was said by his associates, from overwork. He had experienced an attack last Tuesday and was thought to be recovering when the turn for the worse occurred early yesterday. Death came at 3:20 a. m.

The Senate adjourned out of respect yesterday. Senator Johnson, Democrat, reported Senator Adams' death officially with the words "It is with the deepest sorrow that I officially report to the Senate the passing of my beloved colleague. Senator Adams was a kindly man of profound judgment; he was intelligent, courageous and industrious to a fault," he said.

Senators named as members of the funeral committee were Bunker (Democrat), of Nevada; Chandler (Democrat), of Kentucky; Chavez (Democrat), of New Mexico; Clark (Democrat), of Idaho; Downey (Democrat), of California; Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana; Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa; Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico; Herring (Democrat), of Iowa; Johnson (Democrat), of Colorado; O'Daniel (Democrat), of Texas; O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming; Russell (Democrat), of Georgia; Schwartz (Democrat), of Wyoming; Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana; Butler (Republican), of Nebraska; LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin; Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin; Willis (Republican), of Indiana, and Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan.

Speaker Rayburn appointed Representatives Lewis (Democrat), of Colorado; Chenoweth (Republican), of Colorado; Robinson (Democrat), of Utah; Murdock (Democrat), of Arizona, and Anderson (Democrat), of New Mexico, to represent the House at the funeral. The House adjourned after Rayburn had appointed the committee.

Johnson said Senator Adams' body would be taken to Colorado in a special car, in which members of the immediate family would ride, on the train bearing the delegation.

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, said the Colorado Senator's death was "a national calamity. I have never come in contact with a more conscientious or sober public servant. He had the complete respect and confidence of all members of the Senate."

Senator Johnson (Republican), of California, said "Senator Adams had the rarest attribute there is in Congress—courage. He never shirked a duty and he never voted against his conscience."

Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, declared he thought it fitting that legislation to extend present sugar control laws—a companion measure to a Senate bill (S 2041) drafted by Adams and O'Mahoney—was passed yesterday by the House.

Senator Adams was chairman of the Senate Public Lands Committee and headed the important deficiency appropriations subcommittee. He was a member of the Senate Irrigation, Banking and Currency and Rules committees and chairman of a special Senate committee on wool.

He counseled economy in government spending to the last. He had issued a statement, as recently as November 20, asserting that Congress was being asked to appropriate for war supplies "far in excess of the needs for American defense."

In private affairs, he was a Pueblo attorney and banker.

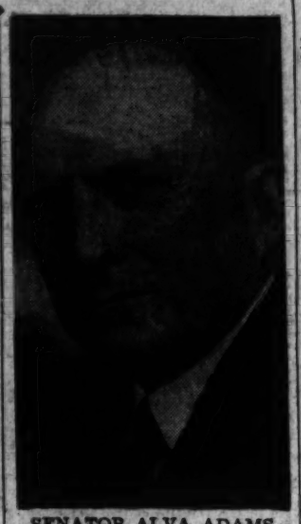
Appointed, Then Elected

Some of the Administration's policies he had approved but he could not agree with all of the President's foreign policies. In early November he had voted against the neutrality bill change to arm United States merchant ships and permit them to deliver through war zones to Allied ports.

His death was the second of a Colorado member in three months. Representative Taylor, Colorado Democrat, died on September 7 in Denver, like Senator Adams the victim of a heart attack.

Adams came to the Senate under appointment by a Colorado Governor, having first served in that body after the death of Senator Samuel D. Nicholson, from May 17, 1923, to December 1, 1924. He was elected for a full term November 6, 1932, and reelected November 8, 1938.

With him when he died were his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Adams; a daughter, Mrs. Joseph Uhl, of Pueblo, and her husband, and a son, Alva B. Adams, jr., of Washington. Also surviving are a daughter, Mrs. James Booth, in San Fracisco with her husband, an Army officer at the Presidio, and a son, William Adams, a student at Yale.



SENATOR ALVA ADAMS

Tentative plans call for Masonic funeral services at the Adams home in Pueblo Thursday afternoon. The body probably will be sent to Denver following the services and placed in a crypt until a burial place is built in Pueblo, it was stated.

With Taylor's successor to be elected December 9, Colorado now has four members of Congress. It is entitled to six. Members of the delegation predicted that Gov. Ralph L. Carr, a Republican, would appoint a successor to Senator Adams to serve until a special election could be held. Senator Adams' term ends January 3, 1945.

Funeral Rites For Mrs. Wendt Set for Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Cross Riddle Wendt, 36, who died Sunday afternoon at her home, 806 Wayne Avenue, Silver Spring, Md., after a long illness, will be held today at 2 p. m. at the Warner E. Pumphrey funeral home, 8424 Georgia Avenue, Silver Spring. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Born near Columbia, S. C., Mrs. Wendt came to Washington about 11 years ago and moved to Silver Spring three years ago. She had been employed in several leading Washington department stores.

Surviving are her husband, Emil Wendt, an employe in the Navy Yard; a daughter, Miss Frances Roberts Riddle, of Silver Spring; her mother, Mrs. Mamie C. Cross, of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Margaret C. York, of Columbia, S. C., and two brothers, Paul W. Cross, of Washington, and Robert M. Cross, of Columbia.

Bill-of-Rights Mass Meetings Suggested Here

Following up the President's proclamation of December 15 as "Bill of Rights Day," the Commissioners yesterday called upon local civic, church and patriotic groups to sponsor community celebrations in observance of the 150th anniversary of the charter.

At a special meeting in the District Building, Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, commander of the District National Guard, was named chairman of a committee to arrange a downtown mass meeting in an auditorium yet to be selected.

Both the community and main public meetings, the Commissioners suggested, should be held between 9 and 10 p. m. so all participants may listen to the President's broadcast from the White House.

The occasion, it was announced, will be closely correlated with local civilian defense activities. At the principal mass meeting, it was reported, the city's corps of special defense policemen and fire fighters will be formally sworn in.

In asking city-wide observance of the day the Commissioners urged citizens "to reflect with deep appreciation upon the immeasurable privileges which the charter guarantees."

The Bill of Rights, they pointed out, grants freedom of speech, of religion, press and assembly and the right of petition, among other rights.

First Lady Proposes Christmas as Usual

By the Associated Press

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt expressed the opinion yesterday that Christmas presents this year should include those traditionally dispensed by Santa Claus as well as practical things, despite the national emergency.

At her press conference Mrs. Roosevelt told a questioner that gifts shouldn't be confined to just practical things.

The Nation's First Lady said Christmas at the White House this year would be "about as usual" but indicated none of the Roosevelt grandchildren was expected to be in Washington.

Dr. Cartwright To Observe 25th Year as Priest

Ordained in Rome on December 3, 1916, Dr. John Keating Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, will observe his twenty-fifth anniversary in the priesthood tomorrow in the parish church. He will officiate at a mass at 12:15 p. m.

Students of the Immaculate Conception Academy and the Immaculate Conception Boys' School will be among the groups that will present Dr. Cartwright with spiritual bouquets.

Born in Baltimore, Dr. Cartwright received his Ph. D. from the North American College in Rome in 1913 and his S. T. D. in 1917. He was attached to St. Ann's Church in Baltimore in 1917, and St. Patrick's Church in Washington in 1920, before becoming pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception.

He is at present director of the Washington Catholic Radio Hour, Dr. Cartwright founded the Critics' Forum here. Since 1938 he has been assistant professor of pastoral theology at Catholic University.

Lafayette School To Review History

The ten years' history of Lafayette School, Northampton Street and Broad Branch Road Northwest, will be reviewed tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the school in an anniversary program sponsored by the Lafayette Home and School Association.

Ten children will present an acrostic exercise, dealing with the school's name, and there'll be a surprise feature. All past presidents of the organization are expected to attend. Leslie Whitten heads the program committee.

Mrs. Sadie Woltz Found Dead Here

Mrs. Sadie P. Woltz, 60, World War yeoman and retired Navy Department employe, was found dead yesterday in her apartment at 236 Massachusetts Avenue Northeast.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said that her death was due to natural causes and that she had been dead about five days. A janitor, John T. Lloyd, Negro, who discovered the body, recalled last seeing Mrs. Woltz on Wednesday.

A native of Lewistown, Pa., Mrs. Woltz lived most of her life in Washington. After 23 years with the Navy Department, she retired last January. She was a member of the American Legion and other patriotic organizations.

Surviving are two sons, Raymond, and William, of South Bend, Ind.; two grandchildren, and a niece, Elizabeth P. French, all of Washington.

Settlement Averts Rail Strike

"cooperate completely to adjust all labor disputes through collective bargaining, through conciliation and mediation and other voluntary means."

It was reported that President Roosevelt was favorably considering the major proposal of the delegates to accomplish this end—the convening of a conference of Government, labor and management representatives to work out policy and methods of a re-established National Defense Mediation Board, to conciliate, mediate and eventually by voluntary agreement, to arbitrate labor disputes.

The C. I. O. delegates, who split up after a morning session to carry their message to individual Congressmen, unanimously adopted a resolution condemning all pending antistrike bills as "ill-conceived schemes."

They adopted a statement declaring that "antiunion bills now before Congress are a threat to labor's rights to live and take part in the defense program."

"If passed," the statement continued, "they will destroy unions, turn free labor into slave labor and create a Nazi labor front in America."

Although the emergency legislative conference announced itself as "unqualifiedly opposed to all forms of legislation embodying compulsory arbitration," it was learned from a reliable source that the C. I. O. had indicated to the White House its willingness to negotiate an agreement with Government and industry which would provide for arbitration as an ultimate method of settling controversies. Under this plan, it was indicated, the C. I. O. would agree beforehand to abide by an arbitration decision.

President Roosevelt was believed yesterday to have received advice recently from Administration labor officials to convene a conference of the sort suggested by the C. I. O. at the earliest possible moment.

Elsewhere on the labor front:

Informed C. I. O. sources yesterday discounted the threat of a strike called for tomorrow at the Bell Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y. C. I. O. Auto Workers at the plant, seeking higher wages, negotiated throughout the day with the company's management, called together by Federal Conciliator Thomas F. Finn.

Coal Parleys Continue

In New York, the three-man board named by President Roosevelt to arbitrate the union shop demand of the C. I. O., United Mine Workers ended its sixth day's session yesterday without comment. The board will reconvene this morning.

In Pittsburgh, representatives of the Aluminum Co. of America and the C. I. O. aluminum workers resumed negotiations over the elimination of a wage differential between employes of the Northern and Southern plants of the huge company. Basis for the discussions was a special report on the subject prepared under the direction of the National Defense Mediation Board.

Meantime, striking employes of the Aluminum Co.'s Massena, N. Y., plant returned to work following a two-day walkout. The dispute had arisen over the promotion of an electrical worker to a foreman's job.

Taken in Tavern

FBI Seizes Long Missing Bioff Aide

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 1.—J. Edgar Hoover announced through the Chicago office of the FBI today that Nick Dean, sought since July 9 as a material witness in the Browne-Bioff racketeering case, had been arrested in a tavern here at noon.

The announcement said that he was being taken by airplane to New York, where he would be arraigned on a charge of conspiring to extort more than one million dollars from motion picture producers.

Dean, alias Circella and Nick Ciriello, and nicknamed "Nickelodeon," was indicted on this charge September 29 with Louis Kaufman, of Newark, N. J.

Hoover's announcement said that Dean was associated with the convicted labor leaders, George E. Browne and William Bioff, in the affairs of the A. F. of L.'s International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes.

He acted as a bodyguard for the pair, the announcement said, and accompanied them during the New York payoff negotiations, sometimes acting as an agent in collecting money from movie producers. Dean disappeared about the time he was subpenaed as a material witness.

Hoover said Dean was the reputed owner of a well known Chicago night spot.

Kaufman, with whom Dean was accused of violating the Federal Antiracketeering Act, has been arrested and is at liberty under a $15,000 bond.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Frank Gold, 35, former local leader of the Building Service Employes International Union (A. F. L.) who told the district attorney's office things about other leaders in the union, today received a suspended sentence on his conviction of extortion.

He was placed on probation for ten years. Gold was convicted last February of extorting $400 from two real estate firms upon threats to picket a building under construction.

He gave evidence which led to indictments of James J. Bambrick, former president of Gold's union, Local 32-B, and George Scalise, former president of the international union. Bambrick pleaded guilty to embezzlement of union funds and Scalise was convicted of forgery.

House Debates Four Bills to Curb Strikes

By Robert C. Albright

Post Staff Writer

The House late yesterday opened two days of debate on defense strike legislation under a wide-open rule that brought sponsors of four different labors bills to their feet with demands for "action now."

"We've got to step in for the safety and security of the country and in the interest of labor itself," Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, sponsor of the Labor Committee's compromise measure, told colleagues.

"The hour has come for this Government to reassert its sovereignty," shouted Chairman Vinson, of the Naval Affairs Committee.

Two Bills Advance in Senate

The House, by a viva voce, vote ruled the legislation in order as two Senate committees advanced two other contrasting bills for defense labor controls:

1. The Senate Labor Committee, by a 10 to 3 vote, approved the Ball bill to settle strikes by "cooling off," negotiation, conciliation, mediation and voluntary arbitration, retaining, 7 to 6, a prohibition against an employer entering a closed shop agreement with a union that has engaged in a strike to obtain it.

The committee obtained permission to file its report while the Senate is in recess.

2. The Senate Judiciary Committee reported to the Senate the Connally bill authorizing the President to take over strike-bound plants and freezing labor relations therein. The report said labor "must suspend for short periods during this emergency its demand that changes shall be made in the relationship which it heretofore voluntarily and willingly worked under without complaint or cavil."

Debate Closes Tonight

House debate on a far wider range of proposals will close tonight and members will start voting tomorrow. The composite measure expected to take shape from the many plans offered may not go to a final vote until late in the week.

Death of Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, stayed demands for immediate consideration in the Senate. The Connally and Ball measures, racing to the floor at about the same time, will not be called up before Monday.

The varied House labor bills were called up under a rule granted months ago to Representative Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, on a measure he has since sharply revised.

As a substitute for this bill, Representative Ramspeck will offer the Labor Committee bill to take over plants if negotiation, conciliation and 60 days' "cooling off" during mediation fail to stop a strike.

The three other bills to be offered as amendments:

By Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, for comprehensive revision of labor legislation to require a secret ballot before defense strikes, ban mass picketing of defense projects, require a financial accounting by labor unions and outlaw sympathetic and jurisdictional strikes.

By Representative Vinson, revising his earlier measure to virtually compel arbitration of disputes by withholding benefits under the National Labor Relations and Norris-LaGuardia Acts from workers who refuse and taking over plants of employers who will not arbitrate.

By Representative Walter (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, a bill worked out by Judiciary Committee group months ago which, Walter told the House yesterday, would "put the unions back under the antitrust laws."

Smith Leads Off Debate

Representative Smith led off the debate with an explanation of the complex procedure under which the House will have a chance to write its own ticket on labor legislation. Smith outlined his own measure and cited Galup poll figures reporting 64 per cent of working men and 78 per cent of all persons polled, against strikes in defense industries.

Vinson, managing debate for the majority, next told members that "if this Congress does not do something about strikes in defense industries, the American people will put a Congress here that will meet this vital issue."

Representative Ramspeck, who as acting chairman of the House Labor Committee worked out a middle-course measure, told members that only about 2 per cent of workers, who cannot be controlled by their leaders, are responsible for labor holdups of production, but Congress must step in, in the interest of the other 98 per cent.

He said one labor spokesman had said labor would "rebel" if Congress acted.

"I don't believe that applies to 98 per cent of organized labor," Ramspeck said. "But if we are going to be faced with a rebellion by labor, we had better find it out now."

In the Senate, a pro-Labor Education and Labor Committee approved the "cooling-off" bill by Senator Ball (Republican), of Minnesota, despite criticism of the measure by James B. Carey, secretary of the C. I. O. Carey particularly condemned the Ball bill provision prohibiting employers from entering a closed shop agreement under threat of strike.

The Ball measure, which will be reported to the Senate for action when the Senate calls up the Connally measure, provides that if an initial 30 days of direct negotiation fails to settle disputes, the conciliation service shall step in. Final settlement would be attempted by a new three-man labor disputes commission which would serve as a board of arbitration and mediation.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, meanwhile, reported the Connally bill for the Government to take over where strikes delay production, with a warning that "labor must do its part" in the present emergency.

A.F.L. Here Launches Move Against Restrictive Laws

Officials of local A. F. of L. unions took steps last night to prevent the adoption of restrictive labor legislation and present labor's case to the public in a more favorable light.

Specific programs of action were adopted by more than 300 trade union officials and delegates at a special meeting of the Central Labor Union. Steps authorized by the group include the following:

1. To ask members of the national A. F. of L. executive council by telegram to call a meeting in Washington of the presidents of all national unions to formulate a program of cooperation with the defense effort.

2. To develop a plan to combat antilabor legislation.

3. To appoint a special publicity committee "to create sympathetic understanding" of labor's position with the public.

4. To appoint a special committee to study editorials in all Washington newspapers to prepare a special report on editorials which attack the A. F. of L. or propose antilabor legislation. This report is to be presented at the central body's next meeting, December 15, along with a plan to counteract the unfavorable editorials.

Frank J. Coleman, recording secretary, speaking in behalf of the resolutions, asserted, "The same organized group interested in destroying labor for years is behind the antilabor bills now before Congress."

Coleman called a "roll" of antilabor Congressmen and singled out for special condemnation Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Alexandria.

Earl V. Nuckles, Of Martinsburg, Killed in Crash

Special Dispatch to The Post

Martinsburg, W. Va., Dec. 1.—Earl Vincent Nuckles, 21, hotel clerk, was instantly killed late Sunday night when the automobile in which he was riding overturned 6 miles east of here.

Leonard Emmert, 21, of Boonsboro, Md., driver, and Miss Barbara Kelley, about 15, of Sharpsburg, Md., were seriously injured. Prosecuting Attorney Clarence E. Martin, jr., said today charge of involuntary manslaughter would be placed against Emmert.

Both Nuckles and Miss Kelley were thrown through the windshield on a curve where more fatalities and serious injuries have occurred than any other one place in the county.

Baltimore Yards Will Launch Six Ships This Month

Baltimore, Dec. 1 (AP).—Baltimore's teeming shipyards, keeping apace of the program to expand the American Merchant Marine, will send six vessels down the ways this month—the largest number of launchings in a single month in the city's history.

Two of the vessels will be launched this Saturday in a "double-header" ceremony. Miss Patricia O'Conor, daughter of Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, will christen one, the Roger B. Taney, and the Governor's wife will christen the other, the Richard Henry Lee.

Five of the vessels will be Liberty Fleet ships and will be launched at the Bethlehem-Fairfield shipbuilding plant. The other, a tanker, will be launched at the Sparrows Point plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co.

The launching schedule: December 6, the Roger B. Taney and the Richard Henry Lee; December 8, the John Randolph; December 20, the George Calvert; December 30, the Christopher Newport. No date has been set for the launching of the tanker Catawba.

Hillandale Citizens Want County Reform

The Hillandale (Md.) Citizens Association last night urged the Montgomery County Civic Association to adopt a resolution calling for a charter form of county government.

The association also urged that police enforce the 30-mile speed limit along Piney Branch Road and took steps to obtain city mail service instead of rural delivery.

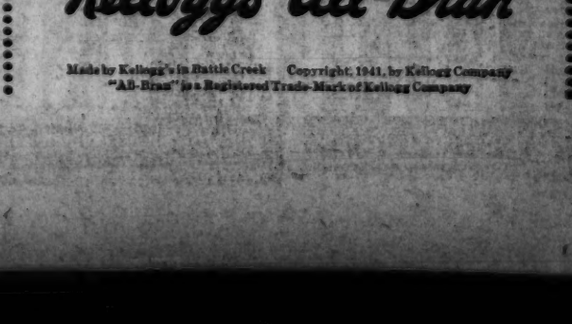
It's an Old American Custom

Remember the first movies? They flickered and jumped all over the screen. But we thought they were wonderful! No one could imagine, then, the technicolor talkies of 1941.

We dare say folks were thrilled when Dobbin first drew a horse-car. But transportation didn't stop improving. Think of the sleek buses today.

Making a good thing better is an old American custom! And it's an old custom of KELLOGG'S, world-famous makers of cereals. Over the last 25 years untold Americans have praised the goodness of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN. But now a marvelous bran from one of the world's softest wheats gives ALL-BRAN new lightness, new crispness, new flavor!



Your grocer now has the improved "golden soft" ALL-BRAN. You'll find it just as effective and twice as delicious as any ALL-BRAN you've ever tasted. If you'd like to ward off constipation due to lack of "bulk" in the diet, eat ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars"!

Record Falls in OPM Rush For Additional Office Space

KNUDSEN GETS BUILDING'S KEYS—Temporary Building R, erected in 45 days on the Mall, was officially turned over to the Government yesterday. Its erection set a record in temporary building construction. Here, William S. Knudsen, OPM director, receives the "Tempo" building's keys from W. E. Reynolds, head of the Public Buildings Administration. At right is Walter Distler, construction company vice president

Commissioner W. E. Reynolds of the Public Buildings Administration rang up an all-time record for speed a few weeks ago when he completed a temporary office building for the OPM in 60 days of building time, 15 less than the contract would have permitted.

William S. Knudsen, OPM chief, was impressed. He asked for another building. Reynolds agreed, promised to better the record and completed the building in 45 days.

"Not good enough," said Knudsen. "Have to do it faster."

Reynolds gulped, started to explain that he was already promising to beat the last record by 15 days.

"Didn't you learn anything from building the last one?" Knudsen interposed.

That was less than six weeks ago. The sequel took place yesterday when Reynolds handed over to Knudsen the keys to "Temporary R," a completed building of 119,000 square feet of office space to house 2500 OPM employes. It was begun on October 21, finished on November 29—in 38 days, a full week ahead of the allowed contract schedule.

The new building is located between Third and Fourth Streets on Independence Avenue Southwest. It is the seventh temporary structure to have been erected during the present emergency. OPM employes already have begun to move in.

Rep. McGregor May Seek Funds for D. C. Defense Housing Construction

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

Representative McGregor (Republican), of Ohio, said yesterday he probably will seek funds for the construction of homes for Federal employes engaged in national defense work here.

His will probably propose an amendment to the Lanham bill which provides 300 million dollars for building homes for national defense workers in private industry and the armed services.

The House yesterday turned aside an effort to pass the bill. The Public Building and Grounds Committee, of which Representative Lanham (Democrat), of Texas, is chairman, will meet later this week to decide whether a special rule is desired to place the measure in a preferred position before the Christmas recess.

Opposed Action Now

Taking the floor yesterday in opposition to Representative Lanham, who sought to pass the bill swiftly, Representative McGregor, a committee member, declared that "probably not more than 20 members of the House" are familiar with the ramifications of the Lanham bill.

Calling for a thorough investigation of the present method of national defense housing construction, he listed 15 questions of method to which he said Congress should have the answers.

Under the bill's present terms not a single building could be erected in the District, he declared.

Later Representative Lanham said off the floor that the bill in its present form does not provide any funds for Government emergency employes here. An amendment would be necessary to provide for local construction funds, he said.

Representative McGregor indicated off the floor that he was considering introducing such an amendment. "I've checked with the housing authorities and found that they do not consider Federal workers in Washington as national defense workers under this bill," he said.

He did not specify how much money he considered necessary or what categories of workers here would be included in the proposed amendment.

In his floor argument on behalf of the measure Representative Lanham emphasized the following of its features:

1. The Public Buildings Administration would have charge of housing construction.

(In the committee report on the bill it was stated that "some confusion seems to exist" as to the relative responsibilities of the coordinator of defense housing and the Federal Works administrator. The committee recommended that it is the duty of the coordinator to establish the need for housing and advise the President, while the function of the administrator is "to construct, rent and dispose of the houses.")

2. Some housing would be constructed for single workers, with a view to conversion into family units after the emergency.

3. Homes would be constructed in conformity with the architecture of communities in which they are built and would not be "standardized."

Southeastern Bankers Hearing Set for Today

The Southeastern Industrial Bankers, Inc., hearing, to determine whether receivership proceedings against the loan firm will be dropped in favor of a reported compromise agreement, was postponed until 10 a. m. today by Justice Oscar R. Luhring in District Court yesterday.

The hearing was originally scheduled for yesterday morning before Justice David A. Pine, but was set ahead when advised that arguments would require considerable time. The case was then taken to Justice Luhring, who set it for today.

Death Penalty In Loveless Case Will Be Up to Jury

Special Dispatch to The Post

Leesburg, Va., Dec. 1.—Whether the two boys accused of murdering Ward Loveless will get the electric chair, if convicted, is up to the jury which will try them, probably this month, Commonwealth's Attorney Charles A. Harrison, of Loudoun County, said tonight.

The county prosecutor said he was not ready to announce whether he would ask for the chair or agree to clemency.

The trial will be public, Harrison predicted, though there were indications that defense counsel would seek to waive a jury trial and put the matter of a sentence up to the judge for a decision behind closed doors.

That could be allowed under Virginia's laws regarding juveniles, it was said.

The 16-year-old defendants are Paul Bernard Hobaek, of Bluefield, W. Va., and Bucky Porter, of Brentwood, Md. Porter is in jail at Winchester, Va., and Hobaek is at Leesburg.

Dean Briggs to Talk

Dean William Paul Briggs and other faculty members of the George Washington University School of Pharmacy will lecture on the use of gas masks before the District of Columbia Pharmaceutical Association tonight in the School of Pharmacy Building.

The General Said It

The war in Libya, said Gen. von Ravenstein after his capture by the British, "is a paradise for a tactician but hell for a quartermaster." One could hardly hope for a more graphic description of the kind of struggle which has been raging in Italy's last major colony. The tactician is the Briton, and the quartermaster is the German.

The fighting has been full of tactical coups from the moment two weeks ago that the British began their thrust into Libya. The thrust has wound up in the dash of a British armored column west and then north across the desert to a point on the Gulf of Sirte west of Bengazi. The importance of that encircling movement is considerable. Much depends, of course, on the size of the force which the British have succeeded in moving to the coast across the main Axis line of supply from Tripoli to the east. If it is sufficient to interrupt the movement of German and Italian troops, materiel and supplies, it will mean the entrapment of the main Axis forces now fighting in the Rezegh vicinity. This advanced British column will also serve as a second barrier to the retreat of any of Gen. Rommel's panzer units that may succeed in breaking through the British lines now standing athwart the main Libyan road from Bengazi to Tobruk and beyond. Yet until the Axis forces have been decisively smashed or their present store of supplies have been used up, the final outcome of the Libyan fighting remains in doubt.

Nonetheless, the British have reason to be greatly encouraged by what has happened in the second week of fighting in Libya. Numerically and from the standpoint of materiel the equal of the Axis forces, they possess the incalculable advantage of a far easier supply problem than that which stares Gen. Rommel in the face. His supplies must first traverse the Mediterranean in the teeth of British sea power whose effectiveness in destroying Axis transports and supply ships has steadily increased. Even after reinforcements and supplies coming from Italy have succeeded in reaching Tripoli and Bengazi, a long and hazardous overland trip still remains to be negotiated before these reinforcements and supplies can reach the actual battleground. With the main east-west road now cut by the British at two points, the problem facing the Axis quartermaster becomes almost impossible. It is hardly surprising, then, that the view taken in Rome regarding the chances of the Axis in Libya is increasingly pessimistic.

Carolina Critique

Army leaders who attended the Carolina maneuvers appear to have been most impressed by the irrepressible cheerfulness, keen intelligence, and physical stamina of the men. In short, despite the demoralizing effect of our half-in, half-out war status, we possess the first requisite of a superior military organization. Considering that little more than a year has elapsed since the Selective Service Act became effective, this is no small achievement. But the Army, for obvious reasons, is more interested in stressing inadequacies than achievements. Lieut. Gen. McNair's critique of the Carolina maneuvers, therefore, dwells at length on training and material deficiencies. As in previous maneuvers leadership was faulty and the consequences of insufficient small-unit training were all too apparent. So far little has been said specifically about bad officer judgment in the Carolina maneuvers. But the difficult process of weeding out inefficient officers, which followed the Louisiana maneuvers, will presumably continue. For the Chief of Staff has made it quite clear that if and when the Army fights, it cannot afford a repetition of the wholesale officer removals which followed our entry into the World War.

It will take time, however, to remedy small-unit deficiencies. Apparently the men are still seriously handicapped by the lack of materiel. During the maneuvers nearly half of the First Army's anti-tank guns were dummies. Moreover, there were not enough antiaircraft guns or machine guns or medium tanks. Nor was there enough ammunition. True, there were relatively more than in earlier maneuvers, but officers make no secret of the fact that the equipment situation is not improving as rapidly as had been hoped. In the circumstances it is small wonder that Lieut. Gen. McNair was impelled to state that if we had to take on the German army now, the results "might not be all that could be desired." No sensible person, of course, could expect the Army to reach the German standard of military efficiency in a year. But there is no escaping the import of Lieut. Gen. McNair's pointed question: If we aren't working toward the German standard as a goal, what are we working toward?

Japan's Problem

The fact that conversations between Japan and the United States are still in progress will delude no American into believing that there has been a change of heart in Tokyo. It is easy to imagine what is going on in Japan. The Japanese militarists, who are now in open control of the Japanese government, are weighing all the risks that would be involved in another imperialistic essay toward their stated goal of Asian hegemony. Those risks concern the other nations that might be dragged into the conflict. If the Japanese could be sure that both Russia and America would not move, then, doubtless, the Japanese would venture another snatch, with Thailand as the victim. If, however, there was a certainty that both would be embroiled, it would be madness for the Japanese to strike.

The appraisal of the Russian risk is difficult for the Japanese. There is a treaty of neutrality in effect between Tokyo and Moscow for application in the event of war with a third party. Japan might invoke that treaty in case she ran into new conflicts over another grab. But the Japanese, who pay scant regard to treaties themselves, would be the last to rely upon a treaty to protect them from Russia. Rather they must be keeping a close eye on what the diplomats used to call the realities of the situation. Those realities, it is true, might possibly persuade the Japanese that the Russians would not join any effort to restrain the Japanese by force. Russia is engaged in the sternest war of all time with Nazi Germany. Into this struggle she may have thrown some of the material and manpower which she has hitherto held in Siberia for the protection of Siberia against a Japanese incursion. She also needs outside supplies badly. In these circumstances the Japanese doubtless think—and probably rightly—of Russia as seeking to prevent any showdown. For the first event in a Pacific war would be the severance of the trade route to Vladivostok along which the Russians have been getting supplies from America. That would not necessarily be disastrous to Russia. But it would be a blow of magnitude enough to make the Russians disturbed over the prospect of a Pacific war.

Still, if the Pacific war were to come, Russia's attitude might change. Japan, after all, is an ally of Nazi Germany. And she has never disguised the aim of including Siberia in the Asian area which she hopes to establish as Pax Japonica. Russia could help considerably in a speedy reduction of the Japanese menace, and this would be of value in reopening trade communications with the United States. It is not as if by joining in an anti-Japanese coalition the Russians would be draining any of their strength in the war with Nazi Germany. The Siberian defenses may have been depleted, to be sure, but they are still formidable and self-contained. And they are probably sufficient to permit the Russians to give valuable aid without undue risk in the destruction of the Japanese power.

But the main problem that besets the Japanese is what the Americans would do in the event of any Japanese stroke. This is the problem which should be solved for the Japanese military mind without delay. Any Japanese move into Thailand could be prevented, in all probability, by a declaration that the United States would use force in concert with Britain, the Netherlands, and China. Our century-old policy as well as our Pacific interests call for such a statement. At no time in history have we been more favorably situated in respect of allies for blocking the realization of Japan's continental dream. It is such a situation that Admiral Mahan said was the only way of protecting our position in the Pacific. Accordingly the renewal of talks should take cognizance of the Japanese massing of troops in Indo-China with a warning of what would assuredly happen if those troops were to cross the border into Thailand.

Alva B. Adams

Senator Alva B. Adams, of Colorado, who died yesterday, was sometimes classed as a "middle ground" legislator. That is to say, he was known as an advocate of moderation in Government policy. And his stand on major issues bears this out. An ardent supporter of the President in the 1932 campaign, Senator Adams found that he could not approve the New Deal's fiscal policy, and in recent years he became a leading exponent of Government economy. As chairman of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee on Deficiencies, however, he was obliged to pilot bills calling for huge relief and public welfare expenditures. He also differed from the President in foreign policy, as was shown to the last, when he voted against the removal of shipping restrictions from the Neutrality Act. In his case the epithet "middle grounder" should be a tribute to a sincere and independent spirit.

Soviet Transport

Judging from the reports of American correspondents who have just completed the 2300-mile journey by rail from Archangel to Kuibyshev, the Soviet transport system, despite war strains, is holding up remarkably well. This is, of course, real news. For it is an important index of Russian capacity to wage war. Ever since it became generally known, some months ago, that the Russians were packing up industrial plants in the west and moving them piecemeal to the Urals, outside observers familiar with the U. S. S. R. have wondered how in the world such mass transportation was physically possible. Soviet transport was supposed to be limited, inefficient, and by western standards incapable of adequate service even in peacetime. That such conclusions were just as inaccurate as past estimates of Russian military strength seems evident from the testimony of the correspondents. They apparently found rail traffic to be astonishingly heavy. Not only were railroads carrying three to four times the normal volume of traffic: they were dispatching troops westward and machinery eastward with a minimum of confusion and delay.

It may be, of course, that the traffic witnessed, though seemingly impressive, was not sufficiently great, from the standpoint of total war requirements, to justify such optimistic reports. Yet it was recently disclosed that for several years the Russians have been quietly transferring factories to the east. So they presumably have had experience in mass industrial transportation. How long they can maintain maximum transport efficiency is problematical. The Germans, for all their vaunted efficiency and organizing ability, have been hard pressed to stave off deterioration of their transport system. And it seems logical to suppose that the longer the war continues, the more difficult will become the Soviet task of maintenance. Nevertheless the news from Kuibyshev indicates that stories of the continuing wholesale removal of war industries from the combat zones to safer areas have not been exaggerated; that the Russians actually possess unsuspected transport organization.

Good And Evil

Probably the first and greatest casualty of the present war was science—or, rather, the popular faith in science as a means of salvation. The world woke up suddenly to the recognition that the same science which has discovered so many ways whereby our lives can be made longer, pleasanter and richer has also disclosed ways whereby life can be made infinitely more terrible. Without science the greatest horrors of our times would have been impossible. Thus, after seeing how potent an instrument of evil science can be, there is danger that we may abjure one fallacy only to embrace another. That is to say, from believing in science as something necessarily benign, we may come to regard it as something necessarily evil. It is probably no mere coincidence that the decline of faith in the beneficence of science has been accompanied by a sharp rise in superstition.

The trouble arises partly from supposing that science as such can ever determine the direction of human history. The anonymous author of a paper on the role of education in postwar reconstruction, published in the British Commonwealth quarterly, The Round Table, points out that if natural science could not save the world, it is wild folly to suppose that social sciences like psychology, economics and sociology can save it. "Our knowledge of the sciences, natural or social," he says, "fixes the limits of the course within which the yachts on which humanity is embarked must sail. But that does not indicate the goal of their voyage, still less supply wind to fill their sails." Science is useful, even necessary perhaps, to civilization. But science does not constitute civilization. The writer goes on to quote the words of Plato concerning the science of his own day. "It is not the life of knowledge, not even if it includes all the sciences, that creates happiness and well-being, but a single branch of knowledge—the science of good and evil . . . Without the knowledge of good and evil, the use and excellences of these sciences will be found to have failed us." In other words, let us go back to the eternal verities.

SECRET MOMENT

Awake from sleeping . . . night is brief,
The moon is in the willow tree
Bewitching every shaken leaf,
And someone must be here to see.

Arcturus, winging through the night,
Remotely gleaming, cool and still,
Is resting from its golden flight
A moment on a shadow-bill.

A sweeping tide of silver song
Engulfs the world both far and near.
Awake . . . the night will not be long
And someone must not fail to hear.

Special Privilege

A tremendous impetus to unity, good sportsmanship, and citizenship—might be given, if the Congress in its wisdom, would eliminate a number of the special privileges given various individuals, out of harmony with conditions and situations available to others on like basis. Many special favor laws are enacted without regard to the precedent established. And the Senate now seems slow on enactment of the House bill to speed up impeachment possibilities against Federal judges unmindful of their oaths of office.

Is it conducive to enthusiasm in "selectees" or "draftees" on $21 per month up to learn that Federal judges can resign under fire even when on trial for felonies, and yet draw their judicial salaries? The program under way against "professional politicians" is going to grow in all States until some of the special favoritism heretofore given is eliminated. F. G. SWANSON.

American Soldiers

What has become of the men in uniform that used to be called suckers and were laughed at and taken over at every opportunity?

A couple of years ago when I enlisted, I couldn't figure out what there was about a soldier that was so awful. I couldn't figure out why we were shunned as though we were outcasts. We're American soldiers, not Germans, and we're mighty proud of it.

What I'm getting at is this. Since the draft came and a lot of these people have their own sons or relatives in the service, they don't call us suckers, etc., any more. Why? We're still the same soldiers we were a couple of years ago.

I'll tell you why, because they have sons and relatives marching side by side with us now. Did it take a draft to make them see that we were only human the same as thousands of other fellows, their own sons and relatives?

I think a regular is every bit as good as most selectees. We came from just as good families and most of us are as well educated.

Wouldn't this be some country without volunteers for the Army, to keep this country free so that most may do as they please.

In the future, won't people please try and be a little courteous to a soldier? He's not in the Army because he's down and out and had to join the Army to keep from starving, or because he has no home. He's there because he feels it's his duty to help preserve the freedom that our forefathers fought and gave their lives for, so that you and I and our children and their children may have the same opportunities that they had. A REGULAR.

Washington, Nov. 30.

Presidential Policy

Mr. Walter Lippmann, in his column published on November 29, states that the Congress can not impose a policy upon an unwilling Executive because the enforcement of policy is in the hands of the President, and that if he does not think the policy is wise or workable it is never a good idea to impose it upon him. Mr. Lippmann also asserts that the leadership in legislation which has to be administered must come from the President.

This is indeed a unique contribution to the science of representative republican government. What Mr. Lippmann advocates is in effect a monarchy in the true sense—the rule of one, or supreme power wielded by a single person. The circumstance that, in this country, the monarchy would be elective does not alter the fact that his theory is monarchial in substance.

The President of the United States, on assuming office, takes an oath faithfully to execute the office of President, and to preserve, protect and defend the Constitution. Among his duties set forth in Article II, Section 3, of the Constitution, appears the following: "He shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed." It will be noted that no discretionary authority is given the President in this respect. If he fails to administer already existing laws, or even laws passed over his veto, he is in violation of his oath and of the Constitution. The President, however, is not obliged to execute unworkable or unwise laws, because he can resign, but as long as he retains power his constitutional and moral duty is clear. The Congress, being a coordinate branch of the Government, is in no wise bound to await Presidential leadership in matters of national policy.

Mr. Lippmann in the same article avers as follows: "But once a policy is decided upon it cannot be reversed." This is a palpably unsound and untrue statement, since a policy, sagacious or injudicious, can be reconsidered or reversed under any form of government that has ever existed in history, and a fortiori in a democratically governed nation.

Traffic Conditions

What was the upshot of all the agitation in the papers and clubrooms, in the halls of Congress and in the garages, as to the hideous traffic conditions prevailing on the streets of Washington?

Two months ago the daily papers had long articles discussing proper way to correct the evil. Now the subject appears to be forgotten.

Where is the New York expert, Valentine, who was to harmonize everything of a discordant nature? For some unknown reason the President's request to bring in someone with knowledge to give advice went unheeded. Will The Post agree with the suggestion offered that the Commissioners don't want any vigorous outsider to appear on the scene, as he might make our local fathers look like antiques?

There must be some reason for the failure of the Commissioners to act, some reason for the indifferent manner of meeting the situation. If we cannot get action we might get explanation, but warning should be given to the Commissioners explanation must be intelligent. HENRY S. RAITHBURNE.

Washington, Nov. 28.

The Coal Case

To the Government of the United States we pay taxes for protection and freedom. We are forced to pay heavy taxes to a private organization for the privilege to work. How long will Americans stand for this condition? President Roosevelt says that Dr. Steelman will represent the public in this matter. If he does, then none will have to join the C. I. O. and pay a heavy tax for the privilege to work or labor.

Threat To Those In Federal Service

The President's press conference remark on Friday, apparently indorsing the principle of the Hatch bill relating to transactions of former employes with the Government, focuses attention on a serious threat to every person in the Federal service. The Hatch bill is so extreme in its provisions that it could never pass if given thoughtful consideration, but a Congress preoccupied with defense matters and stirred by agitation concerning flagrant cases of abuse of influence by certain high officials may pass this supposed cure-all without adequate study of its provisions.

The bill would punish as a felony (two years in prison, $10,000 fine) the receipt of compensation by any former Federal employe for services rendered in connection with prosecuting, negotiating, or otherwise handling before or with any court or agency of the United States," within two years after leaving the service, "any claim, contract, or other matter in which the United States is an interested party." Such a provision affects far more than the few ex-officials with sufficient influences to sway the judgment of their former associates. It strikes at every honest employe who leaves the Government—the young lawyers and administrators, the clerks and auditors, and even typists. Their chance for gaining a livelihood outside the Government will be substantially curtailed when they must hold aloof from all "matters in which the United States is an interested party," with which their duties bring them in contact. Every business and the great majority of a lawyer's clients today, in this era of big Government, will have problems of priorities, wages and hours, labor relations, home loans, securities regulation, social security, and many others. A lawyer whose whole training and experience may have fitted him for fields in which the Government is inevitably interested would be reduced to ambulance chasing and divorce for two years after his Federal service.

While employes now in service cannot protect themselves from the proposed provision, it will surely deter others from entering the Government for they will know that, if ever they leave the service, their means of livelihood will be seriously impaired for two years. It will most discourage those emergency defense employes who know their tenure is short. But the most sincere career man, who expects to serve long and faithfully, must recognize that he may some day have to leave the service, through dismissal, change in personal circumstances, or the acceptance of an outside opportunity when lack of appropriations has made his position a dead end. The ideal of a Federal career service, with the employes well enough paid so that they will remain for life, is a highly desirable one. But it has not yet been established, and until the advantages of such a system are made available the imposition of disadvantages in the form of a club that discourages departure can result only in making Government service unattractive.

None can condone the abuse of influence which has occurred in the case of certain former officials. But we do not forbid driving because a few may drive recklessly. A law which strikes at the power of every former employe to gain an honest livelihood, because of the abuses of a few, is a shotgun statute that may well miss those at whom it is aimed but hit many others. It is unjust to the employes and may undermine efforts to attract new ones in the emergency. Let Congress study direct methods of dealing with the abuse of influence, but let the Hatch bill die a well deserved death.

The Village

True friendliness—genuine good will—these are qualities to distinguish any community these days. One would scarcely expect to find them—and in abundance—in the heart of New York City. Yet there they are to be found in that section of the metropolis, listed on municipal maps as Greenwich Village but known to all New Yorkers as just—The Village.

Quite as if I had moved far away from Manhattan to a village, say, in New England, I was very soon asked to join The Village Garden Club, the Greenwich Village Historical Society and Greenwich House, a local settlement house of world renown, and to subscribe to The Village, the community's weekly newspaper.

Soon, too, some of the people I met at these various organizations, and even while out shopping on Eighth Street, called on me and I returned their calls. It was in this way I came to know the charming interior of a red brick house on Waverly Place, the fanlight above the front door of which I had admired in passing. Nowhere have I seen more fascinating antiques than this house held or encountered a more gracious hostess than the owner of the house who had been born there 80 years ago. It was likewise to return a call that I entered one of the diminutive white brick front houses on Gay Street, Manhattan's shortest thoroughfare, and, I should say, one of the narrowest and most crooked of the city's streets. My hostess explained to me that the houses on both sides of the way had been built, some 150 years ago, by the members of a Weavers' Guild. She also told me something of her personal history—in particular, that her grandfather had been the captain of a ship engaged in the China trade and that his wife, my hostess' grandmother, had always accompanied him on his Far Eastern voyages. Each of her children—and she had ten eventually—was born in a different port and each was, in due time, sent back to the States, to a different city, to be educated at some boarding school. A truly cosmopolitan family! I was permitted to read some of this gallant lady's letters to her folks in New England and was startled to learn, in one of them, that she had been the first white woman to set foot on Japanese soil, having joined Admiral Perry's party.

My membership in the Garden Club proved my open-sesame to many of The Village's small but delightful gardens, some in backyards, others of the penthouse variety, and a few out in front of rows of little houses, hidden from a main thoroughfare along a little lane of their own. Attendance at the monthly meetings of the Historical Society taught me that The Village is steeped in tradition and has played an eminent part in the history of the City of New York. At Greenwich House I witnessed some exemplary Americanization work being carried out, particularly among The Village's large Italian population. I also saw the native gifts of these people encouraged to the ultimate enrichment, not only of The Village itself, but of the country.

As a matter of fact, while The Village was friendly and homely in the best sense of that word, I observed no narrowness about the life there. It was a decidedly cosmopolitan sort of life and persons of widely differing heritages and circumstances dwelt together in harmony and intelligent cooperation. My shoemaker was an Italian. He had a tiny shop in the basement of an old house on Grove Street. Once I got him to take the squeak out of a pair of new shoes. And, every time I passed his shop for a week thereafter, he would leave his bench and hurry out to inquire if "the squeak" had returned. When I assured him it had not, he would bow and go back to his work. My flower boy, with a stall on the corner of Sixth Avenue, was a Greek. He always insisted upon giving me a baker's dozen of whatever variety of flower I purchased. The woman from whom I bought home-cooked pastries, round on Bleeker Street, was French. She always put in a "sample" of her latest baking when I went for my daily supply of bread. A young German couple kept the delicatessen where I traded. At Christmas, the wife smilingly presented me with a gingerbread man such as she had made herself for each of her regular customers.

It was at Christmas that The Village was at its best. Everybody seemed to go out of his way to contribute something to the community celebration. Churches, department stores, individuals set out trees and strung them with colored lights. There was one tall community tree under the arch at Washington Square. Lights, strung across the facades of apartment buildings, spelt out greetings of the season in huge letters. Indeed, after nightfall, between Christmas Eve and Twelfth Night, lower Fifth Avenue was a veritable fairyland. There were community gatherings at which carols were sung.

I speak of all this as if it were in the past. That is simply because, temporarily, I have been obliged to leave The Village. I shall go back. They say anyone who has once lived there always does go back sooner or later. Everything I have described still holds true of The Village. It was like that when I lived there and is now that I am away—and will be, I hope, for many years to come. Whenever I can, I slip over there these days. I forgot to mention the outdoor art show that takes place in the spring and in the fall. I never miss that. Nor did I say anything about the old curiosity shops in which The Village abounds. These are still favorite haunts of mine, especially in the early evening when I am on my way home from having tea with a former Village neighbor and now lifelong friend.

In a troubled world, there is peace in The Village. In an impersonal city, The Village abounds in neighborliness. And, in the old curiosity shops there, are symbols of beauty—bits of Dresden china, Italian majolica, English Wedgwood, Czecho-Slovakian glass, Japanese water colors, Chinese carvings—each of which was wrought in a time of peace and good will and somehow foretokens another such era when the world will abound in communities like The Village.

Japan's Intentions

EVEN THOUGH the language used on Saturday by the Japanese premier, Gen. Tojo, was not so intemperate as the reports made it appear, it is plain enough that he is very much disappointed in the results of Mr. Kurusu's mission to the United States. The question then is what is the purpose of Mr. Kurusu's mission; what has he been trying to do? From what is known about the "limited agreement," which was proposed, examined and rejected last week, the answer is clear enough. The immediate object of Japanese diplomacy has been to drive a wedge between China and the United States, and then, having convinced the Chinese that they have been abandoned and sold out, to make with the help of Nazi agents in the Far East a negotiated peace with the demoralized Chinese in which their resentment would be exploited by raising the cry of "Asia for the Asiatics."

LIPPMANN

This was to be accomplished by persuading us to make an agreement in which Japan would temporarily withdraw somewhat from her advanced positions, and would temporarily promise not to attack anyone "but the Chinese." In return we were to supply Japan with oil and with cotton for gunpowder so that she could prosecute more vigorously her war against China. The plain purpose of this proposal was not peace in the Pacific; it was to isolate and infuriate the Chinese and thus to create an irreparable resentment within China against the United States and Great Britain.

OUR REFUSAL to fall into this trap is what Gen. Tojo is referring to when he accuses us of "throwing the Asiatic peoples against each other." What he means is that we have refused to throw China into the arms of Japan. What he means is that we have refused to make China, which is now our de facto ally, become by betraying her our enemy, a sort of Asiatic Vichy and the ally of Japan. What Gen. Tojo means when he says that Gen. Chiang Kai-shek "is dancing to the tune of America and Britain and communism" is that the generalissimo is not willing to be an Asiatic Marshal Petain.

Gen. Tojo is angry because we have not been foolish enough to sell out an invaluable ally in order to placate for a few months a government which is certainly not friendly. Our offense in his eyes is that we have not thrown away the support of the Chinese national army which holds Japan in check, and in addition that we have not agreed to supply Japan with the materials she most urgently needs in order to make war more fiercely. We have committed the crime of understanding our own vital interests, of not betraying our friends, of not disastrously weakening our whole position in the world, and of not strengthening our enemies.

THERE REMAINS the question of whether Mr. Kurusu, having failed to break up the Far Eastern coalition, has a second set of instructions which might lead to a general settlement by negotiation in the Far East. We shall see. In the meantime what we know for certain is that there can be no settlement in the Far East which is not a general settlement, and that there can be no general settlement if there is any weakening of the common diplomatic front that now includes America, the British Commonwealth, China, Russia, and the Netherlands. No concession of any kind can be made to Japan if it is made at the expense of any member of this coalition. The defensive position against Japan is a chain of which these nations are the links, and the whole defensive position will be fatally impaired if any one of the links is weakened or broken. Nothing that Japan can give in return to us or to any other of the powers can be of any value as compared with the loss we should all incur if any member of the coalition were knocked out of it.

The Japanese have shown that they know this, and Hitler who has sent Capt. Wiedemann to China, obviously knows it also. That is why by sending Mr. Kurusu to Washington and at the same time other emissaries to Chungking, the Triple Axis has made this mighty diplomatic maneuver to repeat Munich and break apart the coalition. But this time the powers opposed to the aggressors are neither so weak nor so blind as they were at Munich, and therefore, they can and no doubt will insist above everything else on standing together. By standing together they will either achieve a general settlement, which is the only conceivable peace, or they will fight together in their common defense which is the surest guaranty of victory.

THE HOPE of a general settlement need not be given up provided the common front in the Far East holds firm. Nothing else can possibly induce the Japanese, only the certainty that they must face overwhelmingly superior force can persuade the Japanese, that a negotiated peace among equals is for them the better part of wisdom. The war party in Japan, which is deeply enmeshed with the Nazis, contains secret societies of reckless men who are terrorizing the moderate Japanese. It is dangerous inside of Japan to be a statesman working for peace, even though it is very dangerous for Japan as a nation to go to war. Only an absolutely firm stand on a common front by all of Japan's neighbors in the east can give the least promise that the saner Japanese will prefer to face the terrorists at home rather than the great coalition abroad.

For the moderate Japanese cannot now be reinforced by concessions which would weaken the coalition and would therefore strengthen the war party. The moderate Japanese can be stiffened only by confronting the Japanese nation with the choice between a general peace and a general war.

THE DIFFERENCE between a general peace and the New Order in Asia is profoundly important. What the Japanese ask us to agree to is that the hundreds of millions of peoples in Asia shall become united under the military leadership of Japan. To agree to this would be to set the stage for that war which has been the world's nightmare for two generations—a war between east and west, between the yellow peoples and the whites.

The incalculable value of the rise of China as a nation and of the collaboration between China and the western peoples is that it sets the stage for a human and general peace. No one talks of the Yellow Peril, about which so much was heard a generation ago, because the Chinese have been seeking their independence in a decent world rather than by joining in an Asiatic crusade against the western nations. If the Chinese were conquered by Japan, and betrayed by us, and made subordinate partners in Japan's New Order with its cry of Asia for the Asiatics, the last chance would be lost of an accommodation between the east and the west. Our civilization, weakened in Europe by the fierce violence of Hitler's rebellion, would be confronted for the endless future with an insoluble, interminable struggle.

SO WE cannot retreat. The elementary dictates of prudence forbid it. Honor, which among nations is force without violence, prevents it. Duty, which is our obligation to those who come after us, compels us to say that we shall not deliver those who come after us to a mortal conflict between east and west.

Imaginary Reports

(The U. S.-Japanese Parley; Final Day.)

Mr. Kurusu—Well, just how do we stand now?

Mr. Hull—We're still in perfect disagreement.

Mr. Kurusu—You are so stubborn, Mr. Hull! Why can't you be reasonable like me?

Mr. Hull—No gags, please!

Mr. Roosevelt—You boys won't get anywhere this way. Do you want my ideas on this situation?

Mr. Kurusu—Up to now we have avoided trouble, but, of course, if you insist . . .

* * * * *

Mr. Hull—There is no reason why peace cannot be maintained. All Japan has got to do is to give in on every point.

Mr. Roosevelt—Yes, that's fair enough.

Mr. Kurusu—The trouble is that my government puts it the other way around. Japan values the friendship of your great country very much.

Mr. Hull—And the United States values the friendship of Japan very much.

Mr. Kurusu—We are both a peaceful people.

Mr. Hull—Well, I wouldn't go that far.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt—Come, come, boys, it is friendly assurances of this type that lead to war. Let's be more careful.

Mr. Kurusu—I greatly regret that we have not had more accord at these meetings. I have done my best.

Mr. Hull—Your best?

Mr. Kurusu—Oh, well, my second best, if you wish to be meticulous.

Mr. Hull—I've done everything I could, considering.

Mr. Kurusu—Considering what?

Mr. Hull—Considering the kibitzing.

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt—This is taking far too much time. You two are almost as difficult as Lewis and Murray.

Mr. Hull—I resent that.

Mr. Kurusu—So do I.

Mr. Roosevelt—That gives me an idea. Why can't this be submitted to mediation.

Mr. Hull and Mr. Kurusu—Not mediation.

Mr. Roosevelt—Well, how about arbitration?

Mr. Kurusu—What's the difference?

Mr. Roosevelt—The Japanese mind would not understand.

Mr. Hull—Neither would the American mind!

* * * *

Mr. Roosevelt—Come, what do you say? Shall we submit this crisis to arbitration?

Mr. Kurusu—Let's not make a joke of it!

* * * *

Mr. Hull—What I want to know is if Japan is prepared to go to war with us or not?

Mr. Kurusu—That's just what Japan wants to know about the U. S.

Mr. Roosevelt—Mr. Kurusu, are you prepared to make any promises to us?

Mr. Kurusu—Promises? Do you mean to say any nation will accept promises these days!

Mr. Hull—I do not think we had better ask any promises; the trouble is serious enough without those things.

Mr. Roosevelt—We are not making progress. Can't we have perfect candor here?

Mr. Kurusu—Are you that anxious for immediate war?

* * * *

Mr. Hull—I want to ask one question, Mr. Kurusu. When these parleys started you seemed warm and friendly. Now you seem somewhat irritated and bellicose. What's happened?

Mr. Kurusu—IT'S THOSE DAMNED NEWSREEL MEN!

Washington Crisis

By Merlo Pusey

Emergency Floods City With Problems

This is the first of a series of weekly articles by Mr. Pusey on Washington problems which the defense emergency has brought to the fore.

WASHINGTON, like the Nation itself, is living through one of the most critical periods of its history. As the chief seat of American government, it is the center of an unprecedented defense effort. It is a great world capital on which the eyes of all peoples in these turbulent days are intermittently focused. Finally, and most important to those who live here, it is a local community that is in grave danger of being overwhelmed by the flood of municipal problems which the national emergency has brought to its door.

No one living here needs to be told that people are flocking to Washington in droves. Since the census was taken in April, 1940, it is estimated that the city's population has increased by an average of nearly 200 persons a day. The Board of Trade conservatively estimates that we have over a million inhabitants in the metropolitan area—770,000 of them in the District itself. The great influx of Government workers in recent months is evident in every restaurant, streetcar, theater or store. The city had grown enormously—faster than any other American metropolis—from 1930 to 1940. Now the last few months have piled another city of moderate size on top of the Capital's previous expansion.

Almost over night, then, the city has acquired a whole new set of municipal problems. Its housing vacancies have reached a vanishing point and the new construction still going forward can supply only a fraction of the current demand for living quarters. Traffic has become far more tangled and sluggish than ever before. And these strains upon our local system of government are only the more obvious of many dilemmas that must be realistically faced.

BEFORE getting down to specific problems, however, the community ought to sit up with a start and take note of what is happening to it. Just as "business as usual" has passed out of the defense picture, routine as usual must be abandoned in meeting the requirements of the Capital under these special circumstances. The fact is that Washington is undergoing a peaceful revolution. Unless that "revolution" is intelligently directed, it may leave permanent scars upon the city and a blight upon its people.

For one thing, Washington has been accustomed to moving at a snail's pace. It has waited years for legislation which all the city has favored. Its cumbersome legislative machinery has moved with all the alacrity of a locomotive on a bridle path. But the quiet city on the Potomac has now become a hustling center of big government. To cling to dilatory habits and obsolete political patterns in the present crisis would be to invite disaster.

In the "good old days" the community laid great store upon relatively minor issues. It indulged in disputes over the location of schools and hospitals. It had to fight hard to secure tiny increases in appropriations. Now it is suddenly confronted with many major problems that must be solved promptly and effectively if the health and well-being of the people are to be preserved in this period of phenomenal expansion.

THERE HAVE not been many periods in the history of Washington when its development has been guided by men of real vision and courage. To be sure, it was founded by great men and the imprint of their prescient judgment is still very much in evidence. But after Washington and L'Enfant laid the foundations of a great city on the Potomac its development for many years fell into the hands of little men. The very name, "Washington," as applied to the ugly settlement that grew up between the Capitol and White House, was spoken with scorn in our own and other countries.

It was not until a reform movement swept Alexander R. Shepherd into a position of power in the territorial government of 1871 that Washington began to resemble a real capital. Gov. Shepherd is too often remembered only as the man whose extravagance resulted in liquidation of popular government in Washington. It is more pertinent to remember him as the courageous, honest and far-sighted official who paved the Capital's muddy streets and closed its stinking open sewers. Today we have to recognize Shepherd as a man of real vision whose only mistake was that he tried to wipe out the effects of decades of neglect in too short a time.

Not until 1901 was the next significant step in development of the Capital taken. That year saw the appointment of a commission of great artists to study the needs of the Federal City and report to Congress. That body revived the L'Enfant plan and extended its scope to the entire District. The Washington of today—that is to say its great monuments and Government buildings—has been built according to this pattern.

NOW, HOWEVER, it is evident that the city must expand far beyond the plans of L'Enfant and the artists who enlarged his original design. Fortunately, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission have given us an extended pattern which anticipates the needs of the Government for new permanent buildings for many years to come. It may not always be possible to conform to this pattern in building to meet present emergency requirements. But it is vitally important that local officials, Congress and the people themselves adjust their thinking about Washington to the larger scale on which the city of the future must be built.

The need for a new line of approach to Washington's governmental problems is even more pressing. At present we are trying to manage a great city by methods that any wide-awake village would spurn. It is bad enough to continue depriving 770,000 Americans of any voice in their government. In a crisis, however, it is even worse to deprive this great city of governmental machinery that can serve the people efficiently.

It is time for the city to jar itself loose from the routine of incompetence that has marked most of its recent political history. If, as Shakespeare says, there is a tide in the affairs of men, certainly that tide is flowing up the Potomac as 1941 draws near to a close. Broad vision and new methods of meeting its responsibilities as a great world Capital have become a necessity in Washington. With intelligent leadership, that necessity can be turned to the advantage of the Nation which the Capital serves as well as the community itself.

Prophetic President

War Forecast Divulged

THE WHITE HOUSE disclosed yesterday that five months before Germany invaded Poland President Roosevelt expressed the belief that Adolf Hitler's Third Reich was committed to a program of "world dominance" without limit.

Mr. Roosevelt simultaneously said that France and Britain had decided then that the Nazi program must be halted, and consequently Germany was "squarely" on notice that, if one more nation was invaded, the responsibility of war would be Berlin's.

The Chief Executive made the "statements to a press conference at Warm Springs, Ga., on March 31, 1939, but advised reporters at the time it could not be attributed to him.

Selected stenographic excerpts from this and other press interviews he had in 1939 and 1940 were made public by the White House today in advance of their appearance tomorrow in book form, along with other public papers covering Mr. Roosevelt's entire second term. Press conference material for the years 1937 and 1938 was made public yesterday and permission granted to quote from it directly.

Five volumes embracing the President's two New York gubernatorial terms and his first four years in the White House were published several years ago. Proceeds from their sale go toward financing the Roosevelt Library at Hyde Park, N. Y.

The President's Warm Springs remarks of March, 1939, were made in response to questions as to what was behind Germany's moves threatening Poland and requests for comment on indications that England and France would fight if Hitler invaded Poland. (Poland was invaded September 1, 1939.)

MR. ROOSEVELT has since repeatedly blamed Germany for starting the war, but on that prewar occasion down South he asked newsmen not to use his name when he declared:

"What is concerning Europe and all the rest of the world . . . is that the hopes that the world had last September (at Munich), that the German policy was limited and would continue to be limited, to bringing contiguous German people into the Reich, have been dissipated by the events of the last few weeks.

"In other words, they have brought into the Reich a great many million Slavs; . . . they have brought under the domination of the Reich a great many million Hungarians, and they have brought in part under the economic domination of the Reich a good many million Rumanians, none of which squares with the announced intention of Hitler up to and through the events of last autumn.

"Therefore, it is felt in every continent that where there was a limit last autumn, there is no limit today. It makes a very different picture. And, there being no apparent limit today, this new policy may logically be carried out on an increasing scale in any part of the world.

"From our point of view, such a policy, in the absence of any check to it, . . . means German domination, not only in all the small nations of Europe, but very possibly in other continents.

"We also know from the newspapers that there have been many stories of the fear of Switzerland, of the fears of Holland and Dutch colonies, of the fear of the Baltic states, Finland, Esthonia, Latvia, of the fears of the Yugoslavs, and the fear of peoples in Asia Minor, Turkey and Persia, for example.

"IN OTHER WORDS, a general fear of an effort by the Nazis to attain world dominance, and make subject to them a great many other nations and races. That is what is giving the world concern today.

"Now, on the current situation, it seems to have been made clear by England and France today that they have decided there must be a halt to the continuation of a policy seeking to dominate other nations and peoples.

"Therefore, by their action, it has been put squarely up to Germany that if there should be war it would come only by an invasion of some other nation by Germany; that there will be no war if there is no such invasion.

"Thereby, the world is being put on notice as to where the responsibility will lie if there is war."

Three Union Officials Paroled

IN THE CASE of the three murderers who procured the death by stabbing of an anti-Communist ship's engineer in Oakland, Calif., and were paroled last week after serving less than five years in prison, there may be an impression that the parole somehow mitigates their guilt. The Communists, who conducted the campaign for their release after the manner of the highly lucrative racket which exploited the Tom Mooney case would have it appear so. Presently it will be represented that their release constitutes acknowledgment of their innocence and of a wicked miscarriage of capitalistic justice and a victory for American labor.

PEGLER

The truth is, however, that these three men, Earl King, Ernest G. Ramsay and Frank J. Conner, all union officials, are murderers, now put at large after a relatively brief term in prison on the ground that they have been punished enough for contriving an assault by five goons of a pro-Communist union faction on a lone American sailor in which the victim was fatally stabbed for opposing the Communist cell on board his ship.

THE PAROLE does not vindicate the murderers for their guilt is still established on the records as the result of long legal proceedings in which they had expert counsel and strong financial backing. The very fact that they were paroled, not pardoned, constitutes acknowledgment by the pro-Communist State political administration that they were guilty and are murderers. And thus the parole constitutes an admission that, in the eyes of this pro-Communist State government, a term of something less than five years was sufficient punishment for those who procured the brutal killing of an American who resisted the anti-American agents of a foreign power.

Gov. Olson indicated a doubt of their guilt but even he would not go so far as to declare a belief in their innocence. Had he believed them innocent he would have been bound in conscience and in duty to pardon them unconditionally because innocent men owe no debt to the State and should not be required to meet the conditions of parole. So it is plain that the Governor, however reluctantly, still regards them as murderers.

THE GOVERNOR expressed himself on October 3 when he said, in an address to the California State Industrial Council, "They have served a long time, I think they have just about served all their time."

The Communist defense organization, or racket, argued that "regardless of the merits of the case, regardless of right or wrong, regardless of guilt or innocence, King, Ramsay and Conner should be released immediately."

That is now the official decision of the California parole board. Regardless of their established guilt which has not been disproved and which is not even denied by the parole board, these three murderers of an anti-Communist American sailor have "served all their time" in less than five years and are now free.

Practical expressions of this disquieting attitude toward Muscovite conspirators are not rare in the courts and State government agencies of California. In another case, Sam Darcy, alias Sam Dardeck, or vice versa, the leader of the Communist Party in California, was paroled from the bench by Superior Judge Schonfeld, of San Francisco, following his conviction on a charge of perjury. This case began in August, 1935, and Darcy, or Dardeck, evaded arrest and fought extradition successfully until November 13, 1940, when the United States Supreme Court decided against him and he was returned to San Francisco. He went to trial last July. He was convicted last August 7 and on September 17 was placed on probation for five years by Judge Schonfeld.

DARCY, or Dardeck, was a leader if not the boss of the Moscow forces in California for years and was the Kremlin's candidate for Governor of this more or less American State in 1934, at which time he swore falsely that he was born in New York, whereas he was born in the Russian Ukraine and so stated in a passport application in July, 1935, when he was preparing to attend the Comintern Congress in Russia. He attended the congress and dodged arrest until September, 1939, when he began a long legal fight to escape extradition from Philadelphia, where he was picked up.

Darcy has had a long career in the anti-American strike activities of the Stalinist agencies in California and now, thanks to the decision of Judge Schonfeld, like the three pro-Communist murderers, King, Ramsay and Conner, he is free to continue his activities but without having served a day in prison.

U. S. Population Gains Million, Census Bureau Thanks Stork

The babies—God bless 'em—got a nice pat on the back yesterday from the Census Bureau for contributing the most toward a United States population gain of more than a million in 12 months.

Blessed events in the year ending April 1 were approximately 183,000 more than the average year of the last decade, the bureau reported. Mainly because of this, the Nation's estimated population climbed from 131,669,275 on April 1, 1940, to 132,818,005. There were 85,486 more immigrants than emigrants, and that helped, too.

The population increase during the year was 1,148,730, considerably more than the 889,000 average between 1930 and 1940.

The excess of births over deaths in the 12-month period, the bureau said, was approximately 169,000 more than the ten-year average. It gave two reasons: there were more women in the 20 to 44-year age group, who have most of the babies, and there was a 20 per cent increase in the number of marriages.

"Sufficient data are not yet available," the bureau report continued, "to determine whether there has been a rise in fertility from any other causes. It would be unsafe to say that the recent acceleration of population growth in the United States was more than a temporary reversal of the long-established decline in our rate of increase, because two of the major causes—more net immigration and a higher marriage rate—are probably not going to continue."

Curb On Henderson's Power Pleases Bankers

By the Associated Press

Hollywood Beach, Fla., Dec. 1.—A legislative spokesman of the Investment Bankers Association of America said today the recent House action on price control revealed a "heartening" Congressional attitude toward business and finance.

Reporting on the association's attempt to force amendment of the Securities and Exchange Commission's powers, L. P. McLean, of Harriman, Ripley & Co., New York, praised the House for placing a board of review over the price-fixing powers of Leon Henderson.

"Great issues were at stake," he said. "If Mr. Henderson had been given his licensing power, we would have been one step nearer the corporative state or managerial revolution . . ."

Emmett F. Connely, of the First Michigan Corporation of Detroit, president of the bankers, warned the 600 delegates gathered in this seaside resort for the second successive year that a trend toward "socialistic, totalitarian economy" had swept the world.

"This trend now appears in our country," he continued. "It's fangs and claws—debt, taxation and inflation—are already showing themselves. The trend rides us hard and we can only protect ourselves by standing firm and fighting it.

"The danger is that many enterprises soon will be in hock to Government, and, from being in hock to Government to being taken over by Government is but a short step. In some countries it has practically been a single step."

In reporting on his legislative work, McLean asserted that the Securities and Exchange Commission was fighting at every step before a House committee against any restriction of its powers. Yet, he said:

"The temper and attitude of the House as to the price control bill are very directly related to our problems. . . . It is heartening, therefore, and most encouraging to note that the House is giving vigorous and independent attention to the basic problem of business ownership and control, and that it is placing real restraints on the extension of the administrative process."

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated Carl Riggs, of West Virginia, to be Works Projects administrator for his State, effective December 16.

Criticism Of Time Irks Wheeler

By the Associated Press

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, inquired yesterday whether President Roosevelt's criticism of a Time magazine article on Chilean politics meant that in the future publications and public speakers "can criticize only those governments which the Administration does not like."

"Does it mean that we can't criticize the leaders of the various governments which the Administration favors?" asked Wheeler, a consistent critic of Administration foreign policy.

"If it does," he said to reporters, "it means that newspapers and magazines, as well as public speakers, are going to be afraid to exercise freedom of speech, because they will realize that they may be denounced by the President."

Mr. Roosevelt termed "a disgusting lie" an article in Time magazine of November 17 which said that President Aguirre Cerda of Chile had "spent more and more time with the red wine he cultivates. Fortnight ago he was reported ill. This week his journalistic enemy, El Imparcial, called for a medical bulletin to allay 'public anxiety.'"

The article added that a "political bulletin" was issued saying Aguirre Cerda had retired from office temporarily "on account of bronchitis and grippe."

Ramspeck Retirement Bill Passed by House

The unpredictable House yesterday passed the Ramspeck retirement bill in a breeze. Even the most ardent supporters of the plan were surprised as the bill passed without a dissenting vote. Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee explained the bill in response to a question by Representative Gore, of Tennessee. Briefly, the bill, which now goes to the Senate, provides for optional retirement at 60 after 30 years' service, optional retirement at 62 after 15 years, optional retirement at 55 on a reduced annuity after 30 years.

The bill extends the retirement system to all unprovided Federal and District employes. Members of Congres have the option of coming in or staying out. Members of their office force and other Capitol employes are covered. The employe contribution is raised from 3½ to 5 per cent.

Hiring here in Government agencies is on the upsurge again. During September 4657 new employes were placed on Uncle Sam's payroll. That's at a rate of more than 1000 each week, and about 155 new workers for every day in the month . . . In the executive branch only, the Civil Service Commission estimates, there were 191,588 employes in Washington on October 1. The number now must be 200,000 as the rapid hiring pace has continued. In September, the Government payroll here was $32,654,962. The month saw Navy add 1620 new workers. OEM, 1515, and War, 520. No agency cut its staff materially.

The rate of hiring was even greater outside the District. Nearly 43,000 additional employes were given Federal jobs the country over during September. The expansion was confined mainly to the War Department, which took on 38,655 workers, mainly in the Air Corps. The total Government payroll was $224,000,000 for the month . . . Veterans' Administration Employes Welfare Association is giving a dinner dance at the Mayflower Friday night.

It is the fad in Washington today to overload and overwork willing and able administrators. The latest to be added to that group is John Corson, director of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance, who has been given another huge task by Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt. Corson is now director of the United States Employment Service (a new job) and also director of the Bureau of Employment Security. He succeeds Ewan Clague in the latter position. Clague was appointed associate director in charge of unemployment compensation. Oscar Pegge moves up to acting director of the Bureau of Old-Age and Survivors Insurance.

Under Corson you can expect the accent to be on getting people jobs instead of paying people for being unemployed. The Employment Service is being recreated, which is a moral victory for that small group in Labor that bitterly fought the transfer of Employment Service to Social Security where it was merged with unemployment compensation. Employment Service has an enormous job to supply industry with defense workers and it's no secret that OPM officials have been dissatisfied with its work.

Public Buildings will move into the new Maritime Commission Building over the coming weekend. PBA was ordered out of the Procurement Building by Treasury Secretary Morgenthau and Maritime was content to remain in the Commerce Building since it couldn't get all its force into its new building . . . Tommy Corcoran, the Agriculture economist, has resigned to do census research for the Panama government . . . In the name of defense, Building Manager Charles Peters has urged Federal employes to cut off the light except when actually needed . . . Illinois State Society will hold its Christmas dance at Wardman Park Friday night.

The President has issued an executive order that gives the Civil Service Commission authority to clear promotions of employes paid from emergency funds. Formerly, clearance had to be through the President's executive office . . . GPO yesterday retired Allen Coates, Henry Davis, Eugene Peters, and Sylvester Williams . . . Marshall Wright, Agriculture official, has been elected to honorary membership in the American Society of Photogrammetry.

That's Right—You're Wrong

Traffic Officer J. S. Davis had just finished the usual testimony against a speedster in Judge Walter Casey's court yesterday.

"Well, what do you say to that," the judge queried the defendant.

"That's right," said the defendant.

Judge Here—Jury Where?

Because of the criminal docket congestion in the District courts here, Judge J. Leroy Adair, of Illinois, was called in as a relief jurist. Judge Adair arrived yesterday ready to take on the job. But he couldn't go to work. There wasn't any jury for his court. Incumbent jurors were just concluding a tour of duty. A new panel wasn't to be sworn in until today.

Final Chest Drive Report Due Today

Additional Calls For Enrolling Cards Raise Hopes Quota May Be Attained

Whether 150,000 unfortunate Washingtonians who need food, clothing, shelter and medical care, will have their needs answered by the Community Chest in 1942 may be told today at the last meeting of the extended campaign.

Total pledges and contributions to date stand at 80.8 per cent of quota, with 178,540 gifts amounting to $1,801,630.17. The campaign quota is two million dollars.

"Every hour and every dollar is important now," said Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, last night.

May Continue Drive

"Many Washingtonians will be dependent upon aid from Chest agencies during the critical year ahead," he said, "and this community has need of assurance now that necessary welfare services shall not be curtailed.

"If victory is not reached today, we shall have to prolong the drive," he said. The Chest campaign, originally scheduled to close November 27, was extended until today because of lagging contributions.

Meanwhile, an increasing number of requests to "please send a solicitor for my contribution" were being received at Chest campaign headquarters yesterday, in response to newspaper and radio pleas.

Hopeful Signs Seen

A hopeful indication that the campaign may be victorious today was sent in the fact that a number of the Chest "keymen" in Federal departments have requested additional pledge cards and giver tags to be used in their final drive. The Government Unit is striving to make up $190,546 still lacking from its $838,000 quota.

At today's meeting in the Willard Hotel, John L. Sullivan, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, will speak.

Capital News In Brief

Station Will Move 100,000 Soldiers

Washington Commissioners are not the only people with traffic worries today.

Railroad officials faced with the prospect of moving through the Union Station 100,000 soldiers, homeward bound on Christmas furloughs, have had to resort to a stagger system.

They have divided the soldiers leaving their Southern camps into three groups, each group departing on a different day. By this system, they hope to avoid a conflict with the increased civilian traffic leaving the District for the holidays.

Officer Seriously Hurt In Library Battle

Motorcycle Policeman R. F. Meyers last night came to the aid of two colleagues who were allegedly having trouble with a prisoner, and landed in Providence Hospital with severe internal injuries.

The prisoner, David J. Simpson, 32, Negro, of 933 N Street Northwest, didn't get off lightly either. After being treated for scalp wounds Simpson was charged with assault, being drunk and disorderly.

The policemen were called to the Library of Congress to help building guards eject Simpson, a porter there, who had allegedly become unruly.

Academy of Science Is Closed to Public

Because of extensive emergency defense work being done by the academy, the National Academy of Sciences Building will be closed to the public until further notice, it was announced yesterday.

Attendance of the 1942 meeting of the academy in April will be limited to the members, their invited guests, the press and people presenting papers before the academy.

Red Cross Rushes Sweaters to Soldiers

Making a rush shipment of 600 sweaters yesterday to men stationed in the North Atlantic, Washington Red Cross workers are definitely aware of the defense program's tenet—speedy production. Another shipment of 500 comfort kits is to be made next week.

A new quota of 1000 turtleneck sweaters, 1000 helmets and 500 pairs of socks has been accepted by the local chapter.

'Seeing-Eye Dogs' Have Their Day in Congress

"Seeing-eye" dogs, which act as guides for the blind, had their day in Congress yesterday.

The House paused long enough in its consideration of national legislation to pass a Senate-approved bill allowing these dogs to enter Government buildings when accompanied by their masters.

Larger, Too

Male Oysters Tastier, Says Expert

ANN WILDE,

22-year-old waitress at the Hot Shoppe in Rosslyn, Va., was crowned "Miss Personality" last night at the restaurant association convention in the Mayflower Hotel

What's the difference between a male and female oyster?

Why a male oyster is bigger and tastes better, too. You can tell the male by the streak down the back of his shell.

That's what G. L. Wenzel, of Chicago, a "food researcher" of 15 years' experience, told a convention of restaurant men here yesterday.

Addressing the sixth annual Southeastern regional convention and exposition of the National Restaurant Association, Wenzel also dropped this bit of information for the benefit of restaurateurs and, indirectly, housewives:

Getting back to oysters, Wenzel said few housewives knew they could double the size of oysters which they buy through following this procedure:

Take an 8-pound, 1-gallon can of shelled oysters. remove 1 pound of the bivalves, replace them with a pint of water and leave the can overnight. Next day the oysters will be twice as big.

That's useful only for raw oyster cocktails, though, because when you cook them the oysters will shrivel up again to their original size, having lost the excess water.

"Furthermore," said Wenzel, "a good oyster shouldn't be puffed up. In buying an oyster out of the shell, you should be sure it is slimy and flat—not fat."

Also most restaurant men and housewives don't know that a hen loses a great deal of poundage when she is cooked for the table, said Wenzel.

He explained:

If you buy a hen that weighs five pounds, you only get one pound of edible meat after she is cooked—that's what the boils down to.

A turkey is not quite so unreasonable. While you get only one-fifth yield out of a hen, you get one-third yield out of turkey; that is, you get 6 pounds of eating meat out of an 18-pound tom after he is cooked.

Therefore, if you pay 30 cents a pound for a gobbler—uncooked—it's the same as paying 90 cents a pound for him cooked.

The restaurant men liked these pointers, among a number of others, so well that they asked Wenzel to come down to Washington next January and conduct a week-long class for them.

He acquiesced.

Carpenter Killed In 3-Floor Plunge

Harry Thomas Brown, 52, a carpenter on a construction job at Seventeenth and M Streets Northwest, yesterday fell to his death from the third floor of the building.

Father of five children, Brown lived in Covington, Va., but was residing at 1718 Seventeenth Street Northwest during his employment here.

Rent Control May Become Law Today

Camalier Predicts Presidential Action In Talk to Dupont Circle Association

The President is expected to sign the District rent-control bill today, Renah F. Camalier, municipal adviser to the Senate District Committee, told the Dupont Circle Citizens Association yesterday.

The measure, freezing rents here at the level of January, 1941, with certain exceptions, becomes effective 30 days after the President's signature. White House approval today, Camalier pointed out, would make the law applicable January 1, 1942.

The Senate committee adviser said he expected action shortly on the House-passed bill permitting children under 14 years of age to perform on the stage here twice daily until 10 p. m. Before the Senate acts, Camalier said, an attempt is being made to obtain agreement among the theaters and welfare groups interested in the legislation.

Other District measures on which Camalier predicted action before the end of the year are:

The vagrancy bill, tightening laws against floaters and criminal elements, already passed by both houses.

The habitual criminal bill, also passed by both House and Senate, being held up to make it conform with recommendations of the Attorney General's office to give the judge discretionary power, instead of establishing maximum sentences for third and fourth offenders.

The court merger bill, which provides for the merger of the police and municipal courts and establishment of an intermediary appeals court here. It has been approved by the House.

The recreation bill, adopted by the House, which would place all District recreation activities under control of a seven-man board.

Takoma Park, D. C.

The Takoma Park, D. C., area has completed its air raid protective system, members of the Takoma Park Citizens Association were assured last night. Officers announced that more than 100 senior and assistant wardens stand ready in the 14 sectors to go into action.

The association reaffirmed its stand opposing "any increase at all" in the District gas tax. A motion proposing a change in regulations requiring police to accept bank checks as collateral in certain police cases was referred to the association's police and fire committee.

Manor Park

The Manor Park Citizens Association last night called upon the District to appoint an expert engineer to advise the Public Utilities Commission on the merits of any subway and underground parking project proposed for Washington. Members said such an expert should also be consulted on beneficial changes in the Capital Transit Co. system should a subway be built.

In other business the association voted to support the Federation of Citizens Association's membership drive; opposed any change in the zoning ordinance that would permit operation of rooming houses in restricted areas; asked that the bus stop at the northwest corner of Third and Oglethorpe Streets be moved to the southwest corner.

Kenilworth

The Kenilworth Citizens Association voted its opposition last night to legislation, now pending in Congress, which would enable the Alley Dwelling Authority to borrow money from private sources to finance projects.

The organization, meeting at Kenilworth School, Forty-fourth and Ord Streets Northeast, also opposed the idea of increasing water rents, favored shuttle service by trains for suburbs to relieve traffic and suggested a faster schedule for Kenilworth-Rosslyn streetcars.

Likewise voted was a campaign to convince the Capital Transit Co. that it should sell three car tokens for 25 cents. It now sells six for 50 cents.

A letter from the District Engineering Department disclosed that practically all was in readiness for laying cement sidewalks along Kenilworth Avenue and Olive Street Northeast.

Progressive of Georgetown

Fine ash particles which trouble Georgetown housewives from time to time are caused by "necessary overloading" of the incinerator in Georgetown, William A. Xanten, city refuse supervisor, told members of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown last night.

The overloading which has been caused by the city's expanding population will be removed shortly by the building of a new incinerator in Northeast Washington, Xanten said. Funds for the incinerator have already been placed in the budget and bids will be let soon, he said.

A resolution asking that Western High School be remodeled to bring it up to date was adopted.

Michigan Park

Michigan Park Citizens Association last night discussed plans for its annual Christmas celebrations. The organization will distribute food baskets to needy families in the neighborhood, and toys to the residents of the Convalescent Children's Home.

Women Orate From Behind Screen As Classmates Note Their Ers and Ahs

TEACHER AND PRIZE-WINNING STUDENTS—Fifteen women interested in speaking in behalf of the Red Cross yesterday completed an eight-week course in public speaking at District Red Cross headquarters. Mrs. Hugh Butler (center), who gave her time to teach the course, is shown with Mrs. L. E. Harris (left), motor corps chairman, who was awarded first prize for showing the most improvement, and Mrs. Eleanor Palffy, vice chairman of nurses aid, voted best speaker

One by one, 15 attractive women hid themselves behind a green screen yesterday and began to orate.

On the other side of the screen their classmates and teacher were critically attentive, listening for "ahs, ers and ahems." They made check marks on note paper when inflections came when they shouldn't, and didn't come when they should.

The teacher was ready with her criticisms as fast as the feminine speakers finished.

"You were a little too breathy," she told one speaker, and to another, she said, "You must read it as if you weren't reading it. And to still another she warned, "You must know your speech better than that. You should sleep with it, walk with it, live with it."

Eight Weeks of Study

This unique scene and conversation yesterday took place at Red Cross headquarters, 1734 E Street Northwest. The teacher was Mrs. Hugh Butler, who has donated her time to be a public-speaking instructor for women interested in speaking on behalf of the Red Cross.

Yesterday's events culminated eight weeks of classes, in which the 15 women have learned to make persuasive, impromptu and informative addresses.

The last lesson involved the broadcasting of speeches, and in order to duplicate studio conditions, the ladies were "invisible" behind a screen when they spoke yesterday.

Mrs. Palffy Voted Best

Following their talks, the speakers took a (silent) vote on which one of them had given the best speech, and which one had shown the most improvement since the beginning of the course. Mrs. Eleanor Palffy was voted best speaker, and Mrs. L. E. Harris and Mrs. William Leahy won first and second prizes for showing the most improvement.

Other women who completed the course yesterday are: Mrs. William Walters, Mrs. M. L. Hull, Mrs. John E. Reyburn, Mrs. W. P. Hynes, Mrs. Herman Mast, Mrs. Joseph Solomon, Miss Mary Slattery, Mrs. Frances Jenks, Mrs. Harry Burris, Mrs. Ray Dunn, Mrs. Robert E. Wise, and Mrs. Millard Herring.

Judge Assails Failure of Proper Charges

Failure of Metropolitan Police to charge operators of gambling joints, in many instances, with the proper offense—setting up a gaming table—yesterday was sharply rebuked by Presiding Police Court Judge John P. McMahon.

Appearing before his bench in the District branch of the court were five defendants, all participants in a gambling game, who were charged with disorderly conduct. The operators of the game, Judge McMahon was told, did not have to appear in court because they, too, had been charged with disorderly conduct at the precinct station and had elected to forfeit $25, the maximum fine on a disorderly charge.

After fining the defendants each $5, Judge McMahon turned to the arresting officer, declaring:

"You fellows had better get busy or I'm going to speak to the major and superintendent of police. The only way to break up these gambling games is to bring in the proprietors and charge them with setting up a gaming table. You charge them with disorderly conduct and they don't even appear in court because they choose to forfeit a small collateral."

Judge McMahon said he did not intend to make any complaints at present but added, "I'm going to watch these cases with much interest from now on."

Under the District law any person convicted on a charge of setting up a gaming table may be fined as much as $500, one year in jail, or both.

Judge McMahon pointed out that police should not have difficulty in making a case, particularly in cases where a man has been injured in a gambling joint as a result of an argument. In this case the injured man swears out a warrant charging assault and testifies he was actually playing in a game.

"This man should be able to make a splendid witness for the State," Judge McMahon declared.

Suit Against Howard U. Lost on Appeal

A five-year fight to obtain about $20,000 in back compensation from Howard University yesterday ended in defeat for Albert I. Cassell, one-time architect and superintendent of buildings and grounds for the institution, when the United States Court of Appeals ordered his complaint dismissed.

The appellate decision, written by Chief Justice D. Lawrence Groner, reversed a District Court judgment which had awarded Cassell $19,687.50. He had claimed that the money was due him for work in managing Howard's "university extension plan" for three and a half years, from July, 1929, to January, 1933.

The appellate tribunal upheld contentions of the university that Cassell's suit was filed more than three years after his extension work ceased, and was thus invalid under the statute of limitations. The court also affirmed that these services were part of Cassell's regular duties with the university and did not entitle him to extra compensation. He has been employed by the school in various capacities since 1920.

In other actions, the Court of Appeals upheld a District Court decision discharging a writ of habeas corpus brought for James Curtis, now serving a prison term for robbery. Curtis was convicted in 1938, convicted again a year later after being granted a new trial, and has several times asked further trials. He had sought his freedom this time on the ground that the court could not sentence him because it had violated his constitutional rights in allowing the prosecution to withhold certain witnesses. The court ruled that he was legally in jail.

The appellate body also affirmed a $5000 damage judgment in favor of Mrs. Dora B. George against Sears, Roebuck & Co. Mrs. George charged that she was injured in 1939 when she was struck by an iron shop truck while walking in a store corridor. The court held that the evidence was sufficient to justify a finding that the store's negligence caused the injury.

Fire Strikes Twice At Northeast Corner

Fire at Benning Road and Minnesota Avenue Northeast tied up traffic yesterday during its afternoon peak.

A partially-demolished building, formerly used as a meat packing house, was damaged. Last night, the flames broke out again in a shed adjoining the main building but were extinguished.

Parking Fee Control Here Is Proposed

Dirksen Calls Rates Excessive; Officials Cool On Subway Plan

Parking fee control was proposed for the Capital yesterday as District officials showed coolness to the Schulte traffic subway plan.

Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, indicated he would introduce a bill to limit fees charged in parking lots and garages here.

"The rates charged at some of these places are excessive," he said. "Congress has just approved legislation to control rents in the District. By the same token why can't the motorist be protected against excessive parking fees?"

Representative Dirksen, ranking minority member of the House District Committee, stated he had received a report from William A. Van Duzer, traffic director, which showed that many of 18 downtown parking lots and garages charge 60 cents a day to park eight hours.

The Schedule of Fees

A majority of the garages charge 25 cents for the first hour, 10 cents for the second hour, and 5 cents for each additional hour. Only one parking lot charges a flat daily rate of 35 cents, he said.

Officially noncommittal on the report of the House District Committee's traffic subcommittee calling for an underground traffic and garaging system, municipal heads were obviously skeptical. The subcommittee is headed by Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

It was recalled that a similar subcommittee suggested such a subway transportation in 1936. The plan was discarded because of the prohibitive costs. At the time it was estimated that an adequate subway program here would cost between three and five million dollars a mile. The cost would be higher today, officials said.

Treadway Objects

On the ground that Federal funds should be spent wisely for national defense purposes, Representative Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts, voiced his objection to the subway scheme in the House yesterday.

As to underground garage, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways and author of the 44-million-dollar plan for traffic improvements here, already has told Congress that underground terminals would require an expenditure of approximately $1500 per car.

He proposed, instead, that a system of "fringe" parking lots be established just beyond the downtown congested area with rapid-transit accommodations to Federal and private office buildings. Whitehurst estimated that the "fringe" system would cost only between $300 and $750 per car space.

Congress Heights

The Congress Heights Progressive Citizens Association voted last night to fight the proposed elimination of all parking on downtown streets unless some other provision is first made for free parking in that area.

The association, meeting at Congress Heights School, Congress Road and Nicholas Avenue Southeast, suggested underground parking facilities or public parking lots or garages, instead.

The organization also agreed to work for establishment of traffic lights at Nichols Avenue and Portland Street Southeast and at Nichols and Alabama Avenues Southeast.

Metropolis View

Any increase in the District gasoline tax should be opposed, the Metropolis View Citizens Association resolved last night at the Cross-by Noyes School, Tenth and Franklin Streets Northeast.

The association opposes any increase until at least some features of the Whitehurst program are beyond the "paper" state.

Japan Can Threaten Indian Ocean Supply Line—China Expects Greater U. S., British Aid

Editor's Note: An outline of some of the broad considerations which may influence British and American policy in dealing with Japan during the present crisis is given by the United Press naval critic in the following dispatch.

By Rear Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr.,
U. S. N., Retired

Washington and London probably are being influenced in great measure during the current critical negotiations with Japan by developments in the Russo-German war.

An impartial analysis of the immediate outlook would appear to shape up about like this:

The course of the world struggle during 1942 depends largely on continued Russian resistance to Germany. If Russia can continue to engage the great bulk of Germany's armed strength, Britain and the United States will have more time to prepare, to win side victories like the present British offensive in North Africa, and to get set for a final victory.

But continued Russian resistance depends very largely upon our ability to get military supplies to the Russian armed forces on the critical southern front in the region of the Black and Caspian Seas. The great bulk of these supplies, which must be sent in enormous volume, requiring the unrestricted use of hundreds of ships, must be sent via the Indian Ocean to be landed at the head of the Persian Gulf, for reshipment to Russia, and at Red Sea ports for the British forces in North Africa.

Hence the Indian Ocean line must be kept open.

But that line can be threatened by Japan, which has the third largest navy in the world—a navy which, during the former World War, as Britain's ally, kept open this very route for the British.

That the Japanese could sever the Indian Ocean route is improbable. That they could harass it, and make transport far slower and less effective at a very critical time, is almost certain.

It is possible, indeed, that the Japanese might be able to cut the the efficiency of this supply line by as much as 40 per cent—and to do this at a time when Russia desperately needs every ounce of supplies that can be furnished her.

From a purely naval viewpoint, therefore, it would seem mere common sense to do all possible to keep Japan out of the great world struggle as long as possible.

Unfortunately, purely naval considerations cannot rule British-American policy. Political and other factors must be taken into consideration.

From our own viewpoint one political factor is the sympathy for China of a powerful section of our people. These strongly pro-Chinese groups, for various reasons, are determined that China shall not suffer, even temporarily, from any program which might be dictated by the larger and more important consideration of defeating Germany—after which Japan unquestionably could be dealt with.

China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek and his associates have taken full advantages of the support of these American groups.

The generalissimo's position seems to be that if American and British assistance to China is curtailed he will be forced to make peace with Japan and in effect become a satellite of the Axis. Indeed he has made it clear that he expects American and British assistance, including actual military assistance, in far greater measure than he so far has received. He argues that Britain and the United States should take time out to crush Japan with their right hands while continuing to fight Germany with their left hands. Then, he asserts, China would be freed and would furnish man power and any other help she could in the struggle against Adolf Hitler.

But it is obvious in Washington and London that China would be of little value as a military ally against the Germans since she has no navy, only a very small air force, no effective industrial capacity, no merchant marine, and few soldiers trained in modern, mechanized warfare.

If Japan were on the British-American side its navy, as during the former World War, would be most valuable in keeping open supply lines from the United States, Australia, and elsewhere, to the Near East, the British Isles, and Africa.

On the basis of this reasoning an understanding with Japan, from a purely naval viewpoint—and provided the understanding could be obtained honorably—would seem entirely desirable.

In the actual negotiations, of course, scores of factors other than military, must be taken into consideration. Washington and London must think not only of defeating Germany—the immediate problem — but of the general reconstruction of the world once victory is won.

Netherlands East Indies Mobilized for 'Front Line'

1. GOVERNOR AND MARYLAND-BORN WIFE—Gov. Gen. A. W. L. T. Van Starkenborgh Stachouwer, of the Netherlands East Indies, yesterday ordered the mobilization of the colony's military and air force. He is shown with his wife, the former Christina Marburg, of Baltimore, Md. In announcing the mobilization, the Batavia radio was reported to have declared, "These measures are being taken in view of the necessity for preparedness and so that the air force may be ready to take its place in the front line"

Writers Disagree on Power of Japanese Airforce

By Devon Francis
By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1.—Tension in the Pacific has led to a revival of occasional warnings by commentators acquainted with the Far East that it would be a mistake to underestimate Japanese air power.

Coupled with such statements, however, are the more familiar appraisals of Japanese aviation, less complimentary and more sanguine of the outcome if the island empire came to grips with another major power.

Singularly enough, in all that has been written of Japanese air power in the last four years, no one has taken a middle course. The Japanese have either superlative airplanes and good pilots, or they have obsolescent planes and poor pilots.

Much of the mystery thrown about the Japanese in the air stems from the secrecy with which the army and navy have pursued their developments. The Occidental seldom if ever is permitted to glimpse, let alone examine, Japanese-made warplanes.

The Western World knows that Japan in four years of fighting has neutralized Chinese air power. But China had little to begin with.

At the start of the "China incident" Japanese bombers had notoriously poor aim, but that was four years ago and Japan's critics concede that the air force has shown a vast improvement.

As for planes, Mark J. Ginsbourg, a Far Eastern correspondent, and a British army officer, H. S. Mazet, wrote in February, 1940, that the Japanese had a twin-engine pursuit plane mounting from six to eight guns and capable of 350 miles an hour.

It had been in service more than a year. Only now is the United States starting the quantity manufacture of a similar type of plane.

Writing in the magazine, U. S. Air Services, "Ginsbourg and Mazet asserted Japanese bombers and fighting planes were superior to Soviet planes forming the bulk of the Russian air force in the Far East. They described Japan as a major aviation power.

Charles Healy Day, who for several years manufactured planes in China for the Chiang Kai-shek government, said on his return to the United States two years ago that the workmanship and performance of Japanese planes compared favorably with those of American planes.

Balanced against such statements are others which frequently poke ridicule at Japanese aviation. Lucien Zacharoff, writing in the magazine Aviation, in August, said: "Japan would crumble like a house of cards if engaged in a great air war."

The Army and Navy Journal, edited in Washington, D. C., in 1937, quoted some unnamed American Army officers as saying the Japanese had a marked inaptitude for aviation, marked by poor shooting. Lynn C. Thomas in the magazine Western Flying for September said the Japanese air force suffered from a "suicide psychosis" which led its pilots deliberately to dive their bomb-laden planes into their targets.

He described a standard Japanese biplane attack bomber as obsolete.

Soon after the start of the China war, foreign military experts in Shanghai were quoted as saying that 100 good American bombers and 50 pursuits could annihilate the Japanese air force in the Shanghai and Nanking areas within a week.

Most writers agree that the Japanese do not have a preponderance of planes. An average estimate puts their first-line strength at 3000 machines. Apparently more critical is the availability of pilots. Military schools until recently were turning out less than 1000 a year.

Thomas declared the Japanese were hastily training parachute troops to effect landings, in the event of spreading hostilities, at thinly populated points in the Philippines, the Malay Peninsula and the Dutch East Indies.

Commentators have agreed that if the war spreads in the Pacific, with Russia participating, the first job confronting the Japanese air force would be destruction of Soviet aviation in the Far East.

Japan, in ordering air raid defense maneuvers, has recognized that her flimsy, highly industrialized cities appear an open invitation to enemy bombers.

Last Contingent of D. C. Selects For 1941 Will Leave Today

Washington's final 1941 contingent of selectees will leave for Baltimore this morning for Army induction. District Selective Service headquarters reported yesterday. There will be 175, of whom 102 are white and 73 Negro.

They will follow the trail of 150 other Washington men who reported yesterday for induction at Baltimore.

'Can't Buy a Pint'

Indians Here To Demand Fire Water

"Ugh!"

Nine dry Indians, sober as a harvest moon, have come here from their Washington State reservations to discuss prohibition and 27 other matters with the Government. Their opinion of prohibition is quoted above.

As Barney Rickard, Pete Lemery, Harry Owni and other spokesmen for the Colville Tribe said, with their voices changing from the soft lilt used when they had discussed salmon, timber, mining and hunting problems, "We can stop as many bullets as anybody else in this war, but we can't buy a pint!"

Not that they want a pint, particularly. Their argument has to do with democracy, and they don't want it understood they have come so far simply to get liquor for the tribe. There are those 27 other things, too. But the parting word, as listed on the agenda, is about "citizenship and the liquor question."

Says the manifesto, in part:

". . . We are told that we are full-fledged citizens of the United States, and yet we are discriminated against when it comes to the use of liquor. We are told that this is a democracy, yet we cannot see where it is truly a democratic form of government when a certain group of citizens are denied the rights which are accorded the greater majority of citizens. . . ."

Spokesmen at the Office of Indian Affairs said the question was very controversial; that trial balloons had been sent up and about half of the opinion favored prohibition.

"It rubs our pride, this having to dodge around up back alleys," two Indians said. "Don't say that's all we came here about. But we do think they're keeping prohibition on all of us because a few can't handle it."

With the Colvills was a delegation from the Spakanes and, together, they said that their young men were enlisting gladly before being drafted, that they wished more would join the Navy, rather than having so many go into the Army. This is because trades can be learned in the Navy.

And they said they had a secret code, passable from mouth to ear, that no decipherers coculd take apart. It was used in the World War, 25 years ago, one Indian counted out, and it hasn't been cracked yet. And, sitting around the conference table yesterday, they said no more about it.

Enlargement Of Children's Hospital Urged

Stating that the Childrens Hospital's "patient load" has been seriously affected by Washington's booming population, Charles D. Drayton, president of the hospital's board of directors, yesterday declared that "somehow we must meet the urgent necessity for plant expansion to take care of the increased volume of work."

The president's statement was made during his annual report to the board of directors, given at the hospital yesterday.

Drayton told the directors that the hospital has asked for funds from the Federal Government, under the Lanham Act, to build an addition to the crowded dispensary space, "this being the hospital's outstanding need at the moment," he said.

Wards Taxed to Capacity

"Our wards have been taxed to their capacity, and the need for additional beds has often been acute," Drayton stated.

Miss Mattie M. Gibson, superintendent of the hospital, also presented her annual report, showing an increase of 6000 hospital days in the past year.

She praised the hospital staff, observing that "with the high percentage of personnel turnover, and with some departments inadequately staffed, everyone has worked under pressure and tension, and I am proud of the way in which this group has daily met an increasingly difficult situation."

Contributions Received

She announced contributions received by the hospital during the past year, among them being a gift from The Post for the Blood Bank fund.

Other reports were given by Dr. Joseph S. Wall as chairman of the medical staff; Mrs. Rudolph M. Kauffman, for the Board of Lady Visitors; Miss Edith Torkington, for the Children's Country Home; Miss Caroline Sweeney, for the Child Welfare Society; Miss Anna J. Keady, for the Christ Child Society; Miss Ashby Taylor, as director of nursing, and Mrs. John E. Reyburn, for the Junior League's social service department.

4 Killed, 16 Hurt In Oil Plant Blast

Okmulgee, Okla., Dec. 1 (INS).—Four men were fatally injured and 16 others suffered severe burns today in an explosion and fire at the Phillips Petroleum Corporation plant on the outskirts of Okmulgee.

After nearly six hours of battling mountainous flames, Okmulgee firemen and employes of the refinery succeeded in removing the threat of further blasts. For a time, a ten-block area appeared to be endangered.

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Simple Test Doctors Use PROVES In 9 Days Thin Pale Watery Blood Can Be Changed To RICH, RED FIGHTING BLOOD!

When doctors say your blood is poor, they know how serious it is. They know that rich red blood is the stream of life, performing the vitally important job of keeping you well, husky, strong, bubbling over with energy; and that when blood is thin, pale, watery, there is trouble ahead. Your blood, you know, reaches to every single part of your body, bearing with it life-giving oxygen, and carting away the refuse and toxic wastes that constantly occur, as every minute your body is building and destroying tissue. Unless your blood stream is able to bear its cargo of oxygen, unless it is constantly delivering body-building nutriment to these tissues, and unless it is efficiently carrying away the waste, you can't be healthy and strong. So — when you are tired, sickly, rundown, constantly ailing, by all means look to your blood stream.

What Makes Rich, Red Blood

Healthy nourishing blood is composed of a number of elements, including protein fats, carbohydrates, mineral salts, vitamins, and a mysterious red blood cell building substance (most generously found in raw liver). Many of these elements you get in your daily diet, although three — iron, vitamins and the blood-building elements — are often seriously deficient. In Boncquet Tablets, a new pleasant-tasting tablet tonic there is combined Red Blood Cell Maturing Factor (raw liver principle); Vegetable (Organic) iron and other minerals derived from vegetables especially fertilized and grown to insure a high natural vitamin and mineral content; Vitamin B complex which contains all the vitamins fortified with pure crystalline vitamins B and G; easily assimilable calcium and phosphorus.

In 9 days — in which time a third of your blood is rebuilt — you almost invariably will note a marked improvement in the way you feel, in new strength, new appetite, new energy, and better general well-being. Remember, every day millions upon millions of your red blood cells are being destroyed and reformed, and if you are not getting the material with which to rebuild these red blood cells, you are headed for trouble. Boncquet Tablets can help you. They cost little to use and are guaranteed to show you satisfactory results in 9 days or your money back. Start taking Boncquet Tablets today.

Hard Work to Win War, Keep It From U. S., Clemens States

"If we are energetic, courageous and far-sighted enough to make our civilization defense complete and strong, we may yet win this war before it is ever brought to our homes, farms, factories," Capt. William L. Clemens, public relations officer of District civilian defense, said in an address at the monthly meeting of the League of Republican Women yesterday.

"It will be the common people of America—you and I—who win it; by doing the same sort of things that American people have always done in emergencies and against tyrannies; by organizing, by volunteering our strength and our enthusiasm, by holding high our ideals of liberty, justice and self-reliance," he said at the meeting in the clubhouse.

"The only thing that will keep an aggressor from launching total war at the things we have and hold so dear, is by making it so unprofitable for him, in advance, that he will see no point in trying it . . . If we make ourselves strong, and our civilian defense well-organized and complete, then failure staring an enemy in the face will discourage him from making an attempt," Capt. Clemens said.

To set up all the services in civilian defense, millions of volunteers will be needed, he said.

"Mrs. Roosevelt has pointed out that the program is so big and so vital that there is a place for every well-intentioned person who wants to render an essential and patriotic service," he said, outlining the principal phases of the civilian defense plans.

Mrs. Edward E. Gann, president of the league, presided, and Mrs. William S. Culbertson introduced the speaker.

League Hears Bill Analyzed

Certain "vital provisions" in the original price control bill have been modified or left out entirely in the bill just passed by the House, Mrs. May Thompson Evans, chief, consumer relations section, Consumer Division, Office of Price Administration, yesterday told a departmental meeting of the District League of Women Voters.

She stressed particularly that the licensing provision was left out of the House bill, whereas the original bill provided for licensing of sellers of commodities placed under a price ceiling.

Inflationary price rises and increases in the cost of living "even more acutely" today threaten to undermine the defense effort than when the President requested immediate legislation for price control four months ago, she said.

Mrs. Evans addressed the economic welfare department of the league at its headquarters.

There are no insurmountable obstacles to the Pan American movement if all the American nations, "having in mind what happened to the League of Nations, do not fail to give our sincere support to our program of inter-American cooperation," Dr. Hector David Castro, Minister from El Salvador, told the international outlook section of the Twentieth Century Club yesterday.

"Differences of race, religion and language are not a barrier which may prevent the American republics from attaining a proper unproblems," he said at the meetderstanding of their common ing at the Y. W. C. A.

The Americas have been the place in which "the most remarkable blending of blood" has taken place, he said. "The Latin American race is a splendid proof of this assertion. In my country, El Salvador, the so-called Indian population, that is, the native stock without any blending of foreign blood, is represented in the census by an almost negligible figure. The great bulk of El Salvador belongs to a race which has the mixture of Spanish and Indian blood, of which it is particularly proud. The same may be said about most of the Latin American countries," he added.

To the question whether religion is a barrier to inter-American understanding, "my answer is definitely no," the Minister said.

"Every one of the 20 Latin American republics is a Catholic country, but you must not forget that you have in the United States more than 23 million Catholics . . . At least one-third of the religious population of the United States, that is, the inhabitants who profess a religious allegiance, are Catholics.

"Religion is therefore, and not only for the reasons which I have just mentioned but for many others, a bond of understanding, rather than a barrier," he said. The message embodied in the Christian doctrine is meant to unite peoples, and not to separate them, he added.

In considering whether "our differences of language are such a formidable obstacle to our reciprocal understanding as may impair the Pan American movement, the answer is again no," Dr. Castro said.

"The number of persons who study Spanish in the United States or English in the Latin American countries is increasing day by day," he added.

"The essential thing is for every one of our Nations to feel that the purposes and activities of the others are not inimical to her own, and in order to improve this approach to understanding it is necessary to show by word and action that each one of our Nations, in shaping its foreign policy, takes into due consideration the interests of the others, as only upon this basis can we have unity of purpose," he said.

Dr. Castro traced the history of the Pan American movement, citing international conferences.

"You're going to make a move . . . to a BETTER ROOM!"

I tell fortunes for a living. When this young lady comes to me . . . naturally I aim to please. I look at her heart line and tell her I see a tall, good-looking young man. She don't bat an eye. So I try the money line . . . somewhere a rich relative is making out a will. She chuckles at that and remarks, "Swell. Maybe someday I'll live way out in the country and commute to work by plane."

That gives me a direct cue! I pick out a line and say, "You're unhappy about something. Could it be . . . yes . . . the room you live in?" Her eyes tell me I'm right. So I go on, "Within a week . . . you will make a move . . . to a better room!" She's almost wild with joy. "Really?" she cries. "Tell me, how will it happen!"

I look long into her palm. "Tomorrow morning . . . in the Want Ads of The Washington Post . . . under 'Rooms for Rent' . . . you will find it! A bigger room, a better room, a beautiful room!" She pays me and dances out the door. Couple days later she's back . . . with a bright new bandana for me! ". . . because my fortune came true!" she exclaims. I bow my head like a true prophet. To myself I say, "The Post Want Ads are anybody's good fortune. Including mine!"

Youth, 19, Ardently Desires to Wed Girl His Age, Who Made Unhappy Marriage at 16; Both Families Are Opposed to Plan; Should He Give Her Up?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a young man 19 years of age and I feel that you are the only person who can give me sensible, acceptable advice. A year ago, I met a very young lady my own age, with whom I later fell deeply in love. She is very much in love with me, too, and we plan to be married some time this year. But we have some serious obstacles to surmount first.

In the course of our friendship, I learned that she had already been married. When she was 15, her father died, and because her mother felt she could not support her, she finally induced her to marry a man twice her age. My parents and friends are opposed to the girl, solely because she was married before. My parents say I haven't the right to marry her; that I would be committing a sin against God if I did so. According to my parents, she may obtain a divorce according to modern law, but in the sight of God, she will still be the man's wife. Most of my friends hold the same view.

If I follow the advice of my parents and friends, I will lose the girl I love—and she is the only girl I ever hope to love. I know (as my parents often remind me), that there are plenty of unmarried girls I could go with. But I love only this girl. And I also know that divorce and remarriage happen every day. But my parents and friends are guided solely by the Bible. Should I take their advice and give up the girl? Or should we be true to our love for each other, by getting married and leading a fine, respectable life together?

Another obstacle is this: Her folks have done everything in their power to keep us apart. They have been against me from the first time they saw me. And if we marry, I would not want to be "bad friends" with her people. I would want to get along well with them, as all sensible people should. So can you tell me how to win their friendship and consideration? Yours truly, E. D. R.

Circumstances Suggest Wisdom of Waiting.

DEAR E. D. R.: It seems to me an ill omen for marriage, in this instance, that your parents and the girl's relatives, as well as your friends, are unanimously of the opinion that it would be a mistake. And if the respective "camps" argue from different angles, in seeking to prove its inadvisability, that makes but the stronger case against the proposition.

Presumably your family wishes you well; as do your friends. Their attempts to talk you out of this plan indubitably stem from an affectionate desire to keep you from taking a wrong turn at the first big crossroads in your life. When one's relatives seem to "meddle" in one's personal affairs, that is one thing. It is legitimate to suspect they still regard one as a child—incapable of making dependable decisions and assuming adult responsibilities. But when one's contemporary-age friends "stick their necks out," to give restraining counsel, that is another thing entirely. Friends seldom can be induced to interfere in each other's lives—and when they act on impulse to do so, usually it is because they feel compelled in conscience to cry, "Danger ahead!" And when family and friends unite to shout, in one voice, "Beware!" the object of their collective concern should listen attentively.

On the girl's side, it is reasonable to think that her relatives would take pride and pleasure in seeing her suitably and happily married. And inasmuch as her first matrimonial venture turned out badly—due, let us hope, to no fault of her own—it is natural that they would show a doubly precautionary interest in subsequent serious contenders for her hand. Assuming this to be their attitude, the fact that they will have none o. you suggests that they must have sound cause for feeling so. Their consistent opposition to your suit is probably deserving of sober respect. In any event, the fact that they turned "thumbs down" on you virtually at first glance, and have maintained that position ever since, leads me to believe you can never succeed in "making friends" with them.

As to whether you would be committing a sin in the sight of God in marrying a divorcee—that is a question to which your conscience must provide the answer. According to some schools of religious thought, you would be—and there is Scriptural writing to reinforce that belief. But, whereas certain Christian creeds would condemn such a marriage as an adulterous arrangement, because taking the Bible's teachings at face value, other Christian creeds would be more liberal in their interpretation of the spirit and nature of the contract, because convinced that Holy Writ imparts its message to man symbolically, in figurative terms, that are wrongly translated if literally construed.

Of one thing I am sure. Since you are only 19, you are approximately five years too young to undertake marriage, with its manifold social responsibilities. The very fact that you lack the courage and conviction, as yet, to "call your soul your own"—as witness your instinctive deference to your parents' religious views on divorce—gives the measure of your general psychological immaturity. If you were old enough, in social stature, to "take on" marriage, you would be sufficiently firm in conviction and stalwart in self-assurance to make your plans without nervous reference to others' opinions concerning the wisdom of your program.

The main facts of your story considered, therefore, the best advise I can give you is: Don't marry this year. Let time itself gradually unfold the right plan to you. If your love for the girl (and hers for you) is the genuine article, you don't need to rush into marriage to preserve it. It will survive a few years' waiting—of waiting to be sure you are right—before going ahead.

'Awkward Age' Clothes Gain in Smartness

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

NO LONGER need a mother lament, "My daughter is growing up and I just can't find any cute clothes for her." That so-called awkward age between 12 and 15, when a mother does not want her daughter to look too old and a little girl does not want to look too young is being hurdled. There are now styles to fit those teen-agers who take neither girl's nor junior miss sizes and yet are style conscious.

The particular problem in fitting young teens is that their figures are not developed, according to Miss Molly Freedman, teen-age buyer for a large department store. Waistlines are often out of line. Figures are either too fat, too skinny or straight up and down. Many of these teen-age girls slouch over and walk improperly. Yet others are so style conscious they watch their diets, Miss Freedman pointed out.

Two-piece, long torsos, midriffs, dirndls and jumpers are the styles liked best by these lassies. Although long torso styles are always eyed most enviously, they are often difficult to wear because most busts are undeveloped and waists are not trim enough. The midriff fashions with the snug band in the center are usually suggested instead of long torsos. The contrast of the tied-in effect in the middle with fullness above in the bodice and below in the hips does wonders for tiny figures. Waistline and jacket dresses help to proportion properly and dirndls hide wide hips. All dresses should be worn short enough so as not to appear awkward.

Lose Two Pounds Weekly By Scientific Nutrition

By Ida Jean Kain

HOW REDUCING has changd! It used to be that a diet ravaged your looks, wrecked your disposition, and sometimes put you to bed. But no more. The balanced diet is science's gift to the overweight. It supplies an abundance of everything you need except calories—and those you can spare. You look and feel better every day you are on this diet and, if anything, your disposition is sweeter. By the time you finish, you are practically a new woman.

To accomplish this, you concentrate on the protective foods for your three meals a day. You try to get as many protective foods as possible in your reducing calorie allowance. Let's get down to calories. The nutrition yardstick allows the woman who sits most of the time 2100 calories per day, and the man in sedentary work 2500 calories daily. But for reducing purposes, you deduct from 500 to 1000 calories from your daily requirements.

Arithmetic Needed

A little third grade arithmetic shows us that a reducing diet for women ranges from 1100 to 1500 calories per day and a diet for men from 1500 to 2000 calories per day. If you are Spartan enough to stick to the low calorie diet you can average a weight loss of 2 pounds per week. And by stepping up your exercises you increase your requirement and can even lose a bit faster.

We'll take it for granted you want to lose and get it over with. So we'll put you on 1100 calories. Within that calorie allowance, your three meals must supply all the needed protein, minerals and vitamins, so "no calories without protection" is your slogan until your weight is down.

It all works out this way. Sugar, which is pure calories, is cut almost to the vanishing point. You take your sweets in fruits, which supply protective essentials. And all fats which do not furnish vitamins are deleted from your menus. You use the dairy fats and reject those from meats, gravy, mayonnaise and pastries. To get vitamins with the starches, you use only enriched or 100 per cent whole grain breads and cereals.

Vitamin Reinforcements

Now, just a word about the vitamin concentrates. Your 1000-or-so-calorie diet can be adequate—thanks to the science of nutrition; and it is far better than any haphazard way of eating. But if you want to feel like a 16-year-old again, reinforce this already adequate diet with one Vitamin A, B1, C, D, B2 concentrate. The concentrate affords you the dietary margin which makes for exuberant health.

Here is the list of basic foods which should be included daily in your low calorie menus:

Basic Food List	Calories
Fruit: Orange juice, grapefruit, or tomato juice	85
Egg, 1, poached, boiled or scrambled	75
Lean meat, fish or fowl, 6 oz. (use meat organs, such as liver, once a week)	300
Vegetables, 2 cooked, 1 a green leafy or yellow	100
1 raw green salad, made with Reducer's French Dressing	25
Whole grains: Enriched or 100 per cent whole wheat bread, 2 thin slices	130
Butter, 3 pats each ¼ inch thick	150
Milk: 2 glasses skim milk or buttermilk, or 1 glass milk and 1 oz. yellow cheese	160

Get Expert Aid in Decorating, Department Stores Will Help

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

THE QUESTION of whether to have an interior decorator's help in furnishing or refurbishing is one for all of us to consider in planning changes. Those who are dripping with money can afford to hire an audacious private decorator . . . while those who have to count pennies can use the services of excellent department store decoration advisers. Should you go to one of these experts?

Well, the answer was put rather well recently by a decorator herself. A musician friend of hers who had just done over her home without help called the decorator in to have a look at the result. "You see I have good taste, so I didn't need an interior decorator. Don't you agree?"

The decorator replied, "Here's my answer—I'm going to give a concert soon . . . true enough, I haven't studied much music but I have a sweet voice. I shall get an accompanist who can tinkle a few tunes by ear. What would you, a trained professional musician, think of such a program? Well, that's what I think of your house . . . it's all right if you enjoy it, but it lacks all those fine harmonies and those sure undertones that are the result of the same sort of knowledge and practice that has made you a wonderful musician."

So our advice is to make use of whatever experts help you have access to. A good decorator will take your ideas but interpret them more effectively and practically than you could when you don't know the tricks of the trade. It's so easy to go off on little details that keep a room from hanging together.

Make New Winter Curtains

CURTAINS are stunning with pinch-pleated valance—so much so that you may hesitate to try making them yourself. But they aren't too much even for an amateur seamstress.

Part of the striking effect's due to the combining of ivory valance with side draperies of rich plum rayon, patterned diagonally in the same soft ivory.

The other special feature, the valance, is easy. Make the pleats or French headings as you'd make them for the side draperies—the way shown by our diagrams.

Only, instead of folding top edge (as Diagram 1 in booklet shows for side draperies) you first sew valance and lining together and then measure off pleats.

To make each pleat, stitch down a vertical fold a few inches, then press fold in, forming three folds or pleats. These pleats you may stitch flat as in four.

When pleats are finished—baste a tape along the back of valance and hang by tacking tape snugly to valance board.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Make Your Own Curtains and Draperies," to the NEW YORK OFFICE of The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Mrs. Roosevelt Greets Woman M.P. From U.S.

Adhering closely to their policy of "no parties without a purpose," the White House has a full schedule this week. At tea time yesterday Mrs. Roosevelt received Mrs. Beatrice Cloregh Rathbone, M. P., here from London and the second American woman to become a member of the British Parliament. She was accompanied by Mrs. Francis Biddle and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer.

The First Lady is due in New York today but will return on Friday when she and the President will receive the Brazilian journalists, M. and Mme. de Betencourt, at luncheon. There will be a dinner on the calendar that evening for the "Open Road" group—interested in sponsoring field trips to different parts of the country. Mrs. Roosevelt will greet a group of South Americans at tea on Friday.

There will be a White House dinner on Saturday evening ("purely personal," said Mrs. Roosevelt) and a luncheon, of the same type, is on schedule for Sunday afternoon. While in New York Mrs. Roosevelt will attend a benefit sale on Wednesday and the immigrants conference and she will visit the Henry Streit Nurses Home. On Thursday she will lunch with the Good Neighbor group, which is headed by John Elliot.

Discussing Christmas plans Mrs. Roosevelt said the White House program would be much the same as usual—except that fewer children were expected to be on hand. At present Diana Hopkins, daughter of Harry Hopkins, is the only child living at the White House.

Asked by one reporter how she felt about the wealth of military toys being shown in the shops this season, Mrs. Roosevelt said she was surprised that anyone had found more than usual for she, herself, had been much impressed by the lack of such toys in the various New York stores.

No cellophane will be used to tie up the White House Christmas packages this year, for Mrs. Roosevelt is adhering to the advice that such materials should be saved. She also hopes to do up her presents in much less tissue paper—as a defense measure.

Although she only laughed off reports of the luck she had brought both sides of the Army-Navy game on Saturday (by sitting first on Army's side and then the Navy's), the First Lady did say "I have never been so comfortable at a football game in my life." Usually Mrs. Roosevelt said she wonders, along about the end of the first quarter when her feet are freezing, why an "old lady" ever goes to such a game.

She's Been Benefit Shopping

Harris and Ewing.

Mrs. Roosevelt went back to the White House yesterday, her arms full of bundles bought at the relief bazaar given by the American Friends of Yugoslavia. Starting yesterday in the Bundles for Britain headquarters on Connecticut Avenue, the sale of Yugoslav articles will continue throughout the week.

Honorary chairman for the day yesterday was Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone. Assisting her were Mme. Fotitch, wife of the Minister of Yugoslavia, Mme. Markovitch, Mme. Nikolitch, Mme. Burja, Mme. Raditsa, Mrs. Eugene Villaret and Mrs. F. T. Merrill. Among the cookie sellers in gay native costumes were Miss Paula Fotitch, Miss Anna Maria Martins and Miss Jean Raleigh.

When Mrs. Roosevelt dropped in to do her shopping about 3 o'clock, Mme. Fotitch, with her husband standing nearby, presented the First Lady with a piece of antique Yugoslav embroidery. Among the many others who were seen examining the wares of colorful knitted sox, brightly decorated belts, little blonde dolls in native costumes, paintings and a variety of culinary achievements, were Senora de Espil, wife of the Argentine Ambassador; Mme. Martins, wife of the Ambassador of Brazil; Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister; Mme. Hurban, wife of the Czecho-Slovakian Minister; Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the Minister of South Africa, and a number of others from the diplomatic set.

Dr. Escalante Gives Luncheon For Dr. Bennet

The Venezuelan Ambassador, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, was host yesterday at a luncheon in honor of Dr. Hugh H. Bennet, chief of the Soil Conservation Service of the Department of Agriculture, who will leave for Venezuela in a few days on a technical mission to set up a plan for soil conservation in that country.

Dr. Bennet will be accompanied on this mission by Dr. Donald H. Hubbel, William X. Hull and James E. Candle, also soil experts. They were guests at the luncheon, along with E. G. Collado and L. L. Saterthwaite from the State Department; Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union; Dr. Ralph H. Allee and Dr. E. W. Brandez, from the Department of Agriculture; Philip Green, from the Office of the Coordintaor of Inter American Relations; Jose L. Colon, chief of the division of agricultural cooperation of the Pan American Union; Robert Knowlton and Luis Pardo and Dr. Luis E. Gomez Ruiz, of the embassy staff.

Sisters to Wed A Week Apart

A couple of busy Saturdays are ahead of Mrs. Kenneth Daniel McRae, of Chevy Chase, whose daughters, Miss Eleanor McRae and Miss Gertrude McRae, have both announced the dates of their weddings—one following the other by just a week. Already the calendar is getting crowded with no less than four parties scheduled for the girls this week, one being tonight.

First wed will be Eleanor, whose marriage to Lieut. Daniel Edmund O'Keefe, of Portsmouth, Ohio, will take place December 20 at Fort Myer Chapel. She will be given in marriage by her uncle, John Callander McRae, and will be attended by her sister, Gertrude. Anthony Caffrey will be best man for Lieut. O'Keefe.

After a small reception at the house, the couple will leave immediately for Camp Wallace, Tex., where Lieut. O'Keefe's duties will be as a psychologist in the adjutant general's office.

The very next Saturday, December 27, will be the wedding day of Gertrude McRae and Dr. Samuel Sherman Spicer, jr., formerly of Denver. Dr. Spicer, who is on the medical staff of the U. S. Public Health Service here, is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Sherman Spicer, sr., who plan to come to Washington from Denver in time for Eleanor's wedding.

The Rev. Henry W. Snyder will perform the ceremony at the home of the bride. Attendants will be Miss Elizabeth Shield and Dick Harris, the latter of Pittsburgh. The couple will live in Chevy Chase at 7037 Strathmore Street.

Tonight a miscellaneous shower will be given for the sisters by Mrs. T. Marshall Keely and her daughters, Miss Mary Jane Keely and Miss Betty May Keely. Mrs. Keely is an aunt of the brides-elect. About 35 guests are expected to gather at the Keely home on Rock Creek Church Road for the double shower.

Sunday morning Miss Marianna Grogan will fete the brides-to-be at a breakfast at Collingwood. Another party, which is to be this week, is one of the secret kind, so the "who, what, where and when" of it must remain undevulged for a few days.

Last night Mrs. Louis Hoover, sr., was hostess at a shower for Eleanor. Streamers from an old-fashioned bouquet held the bits of verse which led the guest of honor to the gifts hidden about the house. Guests were Mrs. R. A. Pence, Mrs. Frank Harrison, Mrs. Esther Sammons, Mrs. Virginia Loehler, Mrs. Genevieve Zanner, Miss Lola Heffley, Mrs. Dorothy Smith, Mrs. Joseph Regan, Mrs. Margaret Hassler, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Johnson, Mrs. Jack Deveney, Mrs. Bobby Lerch, Mrs. Clara Leech, Mrs. Catherine Collins, Miss Mary Pell and Mrs. Thelma Loehler.

Many Reserve Boxes for Concert Thursday Night

Boxholders for the Cappel Concert Guild concert Thursday at Constitution Hall include many of Washington's prominent citizens. Featured on the evening's program, which begins at 8:45 p. m., is Jan Peerce, who scored a great success in his Metropolitan Opera debut in New York last Saturday.

Costarred with Peerce will be Washington's own Frances Nash (Mrs. Edwin M. Watson), whose appearance with symphony orchestras establishes her as one of the country's leading pianists.

Boxholders for the concert include Mrs. Jouett Shouse, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Charles Henderson, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Stanley Woodward, Mrs. Adolph Casper Miller, Mrs. Carl Droop, Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe, Baroness van Boetzelaer and Mrs. Foster Adams.

Lieuts. Downs, Cook Will Wed

Punta Borinquen, Puerto Rico.—Lieut. Mary Ethel Downs, Army Nurse Corps, and Lieut. Bailey Cavenaugh Cook, U. S. Air Corps, will be married in the new post chapel at Borinquen Field, December 7.

Lieut. Downs is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Downs, of Centreville, Md. Lieut. Cook, the pilot son of an Army pilot, represents the fourth generation of his family to serve in the United States Army.

His father was the late Lieut. Col. Seth W. Cook, Air Corps; his grandfather was Col. H. G. Cavenaugh, Infantry, who served through the Civil and Spanish-American wars, and his great-grandfather was James La Tourette, an early Army chaplain.

Lieut. Cook's mother, Mrs. Seth W. Cook, of Washington, has forwarded a white satin kneeling cushion to be used at the wedding. After the ceremony the cushion will remain at the Borinquen Field chapel to be autographed by all couples married there.

Notes of Society — Official and Residential

Honoring the new Senator from South Carolina and Mrs. Burnet R. Maybank, Edward P. Hodges will entertain at a dinner-dance in their honor at the Shoreham Hotel Monday night.

Senora de Munilla, wife of the Military and Air Attache of the Cuban Embassy, has cards out for an "at home" December 11 between 4 and 7 o'clock in her apartment at Hotel 2400.

Col. Albert Kenner, who has been spending several days leave with his wife at their Spring Valley home, will return to Fort Knox, Ky., this week.

Dr. and Mrs. Tomas Cajigas will entertain at a buffet supper December 14 in their home on Charleston Terrace in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Grady. Mr. and Mrs. Grady, who are now living in San Francisco, will spend the Christmas season in the Capital.

Miss Ruth Latimer, daughter of the former executive assistant to the Postmaster General and Mrs. J. Austin Latimer, has returned to West Hampton College in Richmond, Va., after spending the week-end with her parents.

Mrs. George Emmett Mullen, who has been visiting her sister-in-law, Mrs. Carroll Stewart, in her Pall Mall apartment, for the past week, will leave tomorrow for her home in Redlands, Calif. En route to the West Coast she will stop in Louisville, Ky., and Dallas, Tex.

After spending the week-end with her parents, Col. and Mrs. Enrique Benitez, at their apartment at the Broadmoor, Miss Babs Benitez and her classmate, Miss Elizabeth Taylor, of Charleston, Ill., returned to Mount Holyoke College yesterday. Saturday they went to Philadelphia to attend the Army-Navy game, where they were joined by Cadet Henry Compton Benitez.

Mrs. John Waring, who has been spending several weeks in the Capital with her son, Frank A. Waring, left yesterday to return to her home in California.

W. A. Sompayracs Are Honeymooning

Pocono Mountains were the wedding trip destination of Mr. and Mrs. Walter A. Sompayrac, who will make their home in Washington, at the Rutland Court Apartments. Mrs. Sompayrac is the former Miss Ann R. Daly, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius J. Daly, of Everett, Mass.

The coluple were married November 26 at St. Matthew's Cathedral. The bride, who wore a defense blue wool suit, was attended by Mrs. William Wells, whose dress was gold wool jersey.

Helen Strong To Be Married

Of interest to her friends in Washington is the announcement from Glen Ridge, N. J., of the approaching marriage of Miss Helen Griffith Strong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wendell Melville Strong, to William Franklyn Oechler. The wedding will take place December 22 at the Strong home in Glen Ridge.

Miss Strong attended the Warrentown Country Day School in Virginia, the Masters School in Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., and was graduated from the Kimberley School in Montclair, N. J. Later she attended Bennington College. Her debut came at a tea given by her parents at their home in 1935.

Mr. Oechler, who is the son of Mrs. Charles Oechler, of Kew Gardens, Long Island, the late Mr. Oechler, is now a teaching fellow in the department of modern languages at Harvard University.

Otto of Hapsburg Buttonholes Congressmen, Hoping That Peace May Bring a Throne

Archduke Otto of Hapsburg, "the unpretentious pretender" who, but for the Treaty of Versailles and Adolf Hitler might now be Emperor of Austria, King of Hungary, Bohemia, Dalmatio, Galicia and goodness knows what all else, seems to be turning into a Number One Capital lobbyist.

With the restoration of the Austrian empire their chief desire, he and a number of faithful followers are spending hours on end in Capitol Hill offices these days. And, in keeping with the lobbying pattern, they are also giving a few parties on the side for the purpose of convincing some key Senators and Representatives that a resolution denying United States recognition of the Anschluss (1938) might well become a Congressional bill.

Having taken an apartment at the Broadmoor, Archduke Otto has started a series of small teas at which members of Congress will make up most of the guest list. The first took place last Wednesday. The next is planned for tomorrow afternoon.

Several members of the House and Senate, talking to Otto across their office desks recently, have been favorably impressed with him and are giving more than an ear in passing to the resolution in which he is interested.

Dunns Will Have a 'House-Cooling'

A "house cooling" is on the calendar for the James Clement Dunns this afternoon, after 5:30. Having sold their place at 27 Observatory Circle to the Government of New Zealand, Mr. and Mrs. Dunn have asked a number of their friends in for a farewell fete in the surroundings they have called home for a number of years.

The middle of December will find them settled at 1714 Hoban Road. Recently returned from a vacation in Florida, Mrs. Dunn already is in the throes of plans for moving and this afternoon's fete is the only time she will take off within the next few days. New Zealand's new legation will open its doors in the Observatory Circle house shortly after the new year.

More Party Patter: The Minister of Finland and Mme. Procope, will entertain at dinner this evening . . . Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcok will be hostess at a similar affair on Saturday evening, and Mrs. D. Buchanan Merryman also has invitations out for a dinner. Hers is set for Tuesday, December 9. . . . Mrs. Randall Hagner will gather in a number of friends on Friday afternoon, "after 5:30." . . . and at the same time Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Gallman (he's with the State Department) will also be "at home."

Mrs. Black Tops Off Vacation at The Greenbrier

Now finishing off a late autumn vacation at the Greenbrier Hotel, White Sulphur, W. Va., is Mrs. Harry S. Black, who is due to arrive in Washington December 16. She has taken an apartment at the Anchorage and plans to be here at least a month . . . Here's hats off to Mrs. L. H. Paul Chapin of New York, sister-in-law of Mrs. Francis Biddle, who has had a big hand in starting a new kind of school for post-debutantes. Pupils there will be taught how to type, keep books and write a good English sentence; also how to manage their own affairs or obtain a job, if necessary. Grand idea . . . Mrs. Charles S. Whitman, of New York, will be in town for a short visit this week; will stay at the Carlton Hotel, and will give a dinner there tomorrow night in honor of Walter P. Chrysler, of New York and the Virginia hunting country.

Friends Toast Gen. Gullion At Reception

The new Provost Marshal General shared honors with a portrait yesterday, but both got plenty of attention from shortly after 5 p. m., until well past the usual time for dinner.

With George Abell as host in his apartment on Q Street, the fete was arranged in honor of Maj. Gen. Allen W. Gullion who, earlier yesterday, stepped out of his four-year role as Judge Advocate General of the Army to become Provost Marshal General. But popular Gen. Gullion generously shared the spotlight with a new portrait of the host's son, Tylor Abell.

Painted by Azadia Newman and completed only a few days ago, the picture hangs on the wall of the library, just off the drawing room. Yesterday, traffic there was typically of the Washington jam-variety, as guests on their way to the inclosed porch, lingered as long as possible to look at the study of young Abell, surveying them thoughtfully from its framed vantage point.

Honor Guest Wears Uniform

Arriving well ahead of the crowd, Gen. Gullion was smartly turned out in uniform. "I had to wear it to take my oath of office this morning," he added, almost apologetically, "and I simply didn't have time to change."

There was no need to make excuses, somebody observed; and another guest added that she hadn't seen the general looking so fit since that day, a few months ago, when his own portrait, also done by Azadia Newman, was displayed for the first time at the Shoreham Hotel.

From a few minutes after 5 o'clock, until after 7:30, generals, admirals, and residential society in droves were making their way in to the party. En route to the newly painted knocker on Mr. Abell's door, guests stopped by the next-door apartment of Maj. Juan Sedillo to deposit their coats. Only a few more steps down the hall, and they were joining the throng that helped to make the fete one of the most enjoyable this season.

Social Notables There in Droves

Autumn blossoms, in deep reds and white, brimmed from low bowls in the drawing room and contrasted nicely with the soft green carpets that soften the tread and delight the eye throughout the apartment. Mr. Abell received wherever he happened to be . . . near the drawing room door . . . or in the library . . . or out on the inclosed porch, or even in the bedroom, where quite a crowd collected.

During the earlier part of the party, Gen. Gullion greeted guests in the library. Later, he moved to the inclosed porch, and still later he was back in the drawing room.

Gayly informal from first to last (and "last," incidentally, was quite late enough), the party moved merrily along. Congratulations to Gen. Gullion for stepping out of one important post into another, and to the country in general because it has such an able man as the new Provost Marshall General, were accented with champagne toasts, and—on the part of several service celebrities—with a flood of reminiscences about other men who had filled the post.

Seems, for example, that yesterday morning marked the first time in history that simultaneous oath-taking has been put into effect in connection with the offices of Judge Advocate General and Provost Marshal General.

"Administering an oath to my successor, and taking oath of my new office at the same time was quite an experience," said Gen. Gullion. "Almost like a double ring ceremony," he added with a chuckle.

Incidentally, his successor, Maj. Gen. Myron C. Cramer, was among the guests at the party, and got a lion's share of attention all on his own.

Five admirals, half a dozen generals and enough colonels to command a small Army were sprinkled through the crowd. Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Towers came early and stayed late. Rear Admiral Arthur J. Hepburn was surrounded from the moment he arrived. Maj. Gen. Cramer, in full uniform, was accompanied by Mrs. Cramer and their pretty daughter, Mary. Col. and Mrs. Horace Smith were there; also Maj. Sedillo, Maj. Jack O'Brien and many others from the service set.

Justice Frank Murphy arrived with his sister, Mrs. Margaret Tehan, and later went on to the duck dinner given by Baron and Baroness Stackleberg. Mrs. J. L. Houghteling was among those present as were Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Mrs. Eldridge Jordan, Capt. Fred Roy, Capt. and Mrs. Karl Wessel, Mrs. William P. MacCracken and Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Morgan, who were going on later to the small dinner given by Representative and Mrs. Mike Monroney. Mrs. Joseph Casey came in to Mr. Abell's party with her brother, Drew Dudley. Lieut. Otway-Smithers chatted with Mrs. Pearsons Rust and Miss Dorothea Villard. Mrs. Sidney Lee was there; also, the former Polish Counselor and Mme. Sokolowska, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Davies Walker, Dr. and Mme. H. R. Van Houten and George Williams.

The Sterlings Given Dinner By Mrs. Atwill

Complimenting the retiring United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Frederick Sterling, Mrs. Lionel Atwill entertained at dinner last evening at the Foxhall Road home of her mother, Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury. The Sterlings recently returned to Washington from Newport, and they have leased historic Blair House for the season.

Last evening's party carried out a tradition that began a number of years ago when Mrs. Atwill (then Louise Cromwell) and Mrs. Sterling, the former Dorothy Williams, were debutantes, deciding that each winter they would give each other a party, provided they happened to be in the same city.

Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed were ranking guests at the dinner. Others there were Representative and Mrs. Martin Dies, Representative and Mrs. Albert Thomas, Rear Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Conger Pratt, Col. and Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt.

Still others there were J. Edgar Hoover, Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs. John Ide, of Philadelphia; Miss Louise Boyd, Sir Howard Dingerville, of Ottawa, Canada; Lucius Humphries and William Wadsworth Wood, of New York, and James H. R. Cromwell, brother of the hostess.

Mrs. Keyes, Writer, Honored by Drakes With Luncheon

Although rumor and a Washington newspaper had sent novelist Frances Parkinson Keyes off to New Orleans ahead of time, she is still here and was on hand yesterday for a luncheon given in her honor by Mrs. Charles B. Drake at the latter's home, 1909 S Street.

The ten guests who gathered to greet Mrs. Keyes learned the real story of where she has been the past few days. Instead of starting off for New Orleans following the tea given a few days ago by Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mrs. Keyes went to her home in New Hampshire for a brief stay and then stopped off in New York for a visit.

Her trip to New Orleans, where she will spend the remainder of the year, is still on the calendar, however, but the date of her departure is not yet decided.

McConihes Sell House To Mr. and Mrs. Oakes

Mr. and Mrs. F. Moran McConihe have sold their R Street house to Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Hawley Oakes, who returned to this country from Calcutta, India, some time ago. Mr. and Mrs. Oakes plan to move in within a few days, and meanwhile the McConihe's are staying with Mrs. Eugene C. Carusi in her home at 4800 Dexter Street.

Mr. Oakes, who has been United States Consul in Calcutta, is now on duty in the State Department. He and Mrs. Oakes have been living at the Wardman Park Hotel since arriving in Washington.

Many From Washington Attend Baltimore Bachelors' Cotillon

That ancient and honorable institution—The Baltimore Bachelor's Cotillion—went on the calendar last evening with five Washington buds taking part in figure for out-of-towners. Festooned with flowers, the Old Lyric Theater, once again took on the gay appearance it has so many years past. From the boxes, garlanded with wreaths of southern smilax, proud parents looked down on ther debutantes—in frothy white tulle—dancing to waltz tunes.

Any number of dinner parties preceded the ball and as a matter of fact, Baltimore has been in a dither of entertaining all week. Several of the Washington girls have been there for two or three days attending the many luncheons, teas and dinners feting Baltimore belles.

Miss Eileen Erwin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, attended the dinner party given last night in honor of Miss Ann Byrd Woods, a Baltimore bud, by her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Machan. Miss Erwin had chosen a cream net frock with a panel of rare lace down the front and forming a border about the wide skirt. Her off-the-shoulder neckline was edged in a frill of lace, and she carried a bouquet of deep red camellias.

While Miss Erwin was attending the young-set dinner party, her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, were hosts to a dozen at dinner given at the Belvedere Hotel. Guests included the debutante's sponsors, Charles W. Hoff, of Baltimore, and Robert Parsons, of this city.

Carol Franklin Makes Debut

Miss Camilla Edge, who bowed to society last summer at a tea dance, made the memorable trip to Baltimore last night. Miss Edge is the daughter of the former Ambassador to France and Mrs. Walter E. Edge. Her father also was for many years Senator from New Jersey.

Stepping out in a cloud of white tulle, scattered with ostrich tips, Miss Carol Franklin, daughter of Mrs. J. Harris Franklin, made her bow at the Baltimore ball. Her bouffant frock was edged about the decolletage with ostrich tips and tiny fans, fashioned of glittering beads, were outlined in feathers.

She carried an old-fashioned bouquet. Preceding the dance she attended a dinner party given by Talbot Speer at the Elkridge Club in honor of Miss Elizabeth Melvin, of Annapolis.

Miss Hillis Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, was among the Washington debs attending the cotillion last night. She wore a white silk net frock edged in froths of white ostrich plumes and the bouffant skirt was sprinkled with plumes. Miss Patricia Morris, sister of the bud and debutante of several seasons ago, made her bow at the Baltimore Cotillion.

Mrs. Tunstall Smith Dinner Hostess

Preceding the dance, Miss Morris attended the dinner given in honor of Miss Patricia Tyson and Miss Elizabth Tyson, two of the Maryland city's debutantes of the season. Mrs. Turnstall Smith was hostess at the dinner.

Miss Phoebe Spillman, daughter of Mrs. Harry Pool, of Warrenton, Va., was among the girls, well known in this vicinity, making her debut last night at the historic cotillion. Miss Spillman has been spending the last few days in Baltimore attending the varous festivities. Miss Dorese Bell, daughter of Mrs. E. Rogers Bell, came down from her studies at the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York to attend the ball.

Among those who went over from Washington were Mrs. Osmun Latrobe, who attended the dinner party given before the cotillion by Mr. and Mrs. August Edmund Sattler at their home in Baltimore in honor of their debutante daughter, Miss Marie Theresa Sattler. Also attending from Washington were Col. Fred Johnson and Capt. Alfred Mulliken.

British Aide Will Be Host

Sir Ronald Campbell, the British Minister, will entertain in his box at Constitution Hall this evening when his countryman, Sir Thomas Beecham, leads the Philadelphia Orchestra in the second concert of its Washington season.

The Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowska and their party will be in the box usually occupied by Mrs. Roosevelt, while Mrs. Adolph C. Miller will have as her guests, on the other side of the house, the Yugoslavian Minister and Mme. Constantin Fotitch.

Others of the Capital's British circles honoring the conductor noted for his interpretations of Mozart and Haydn, whose symphonies he has programmed for the evening, include Lady Salter, Humphrey Clarke, third secretary of the embassy, and Miss M. A. Craig McGeachey. This evening's appearance will be Sir Thomas' first in Washington since 1936, when he also led the Philadelphians.

Lowreys Entertain Their House Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Lowrey entertained informally at dinner last night in honor of their house-guests, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Todd Martin, of Mobile, Ala.

Several parties are being planned in honor of the Martins and among the hosts will be Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Lapp. En route to New York, the Martins plan to stay in the Capital until the end of the week.

Dinner to Precede Christmas Dance

Miss Mary McNeil and Miss Peggy Osterman will be cohostesses at a large dinner before the Christmas night dance at Chevy Chase Country Club.

Both girls were graduated last June from the Holton Arms School. Miss McNeil, who is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Edwin C. McNeil, will leave in January for West Point, N. Y., where her father will be professor of law.

BOWL GAMES LACK 'OOMPH'

It looks like pretty weak programming for the various New Year's Day bowl games. Announcement that it would be Oregon State vs. Duke in the Rose Bowl is not exactly exciting, and none of the other bowls will present anything resembling a title game. When all the bowls are emptied before dusk on January 1, Minnesota will still be the best team in the land.

POVICH

The Rose Bowl is taking something of a rap from its policy of presenting the Pacific Coast Conference champion as one of the contenders each year. In this case, it will be a twice-beaten Oregon State team that will meet Duke. This is a year when the Rose Bowl winner can claim no stamp of greatness.

The Pasadena folks sort of had to pick Duke as the Eastern contender. At least they were getting one unbeaten team into the arena. Duke, however, has not been a team to excite the imagination this year. The Blue Devils are unbeaten and untied, but their schedule wasn't much. Duke's proudest boast is a 19-6 victory over Tennessee, a club that was scored on by every team it met, but one. Otherwise Duke raced through such setup opposition as Wake Forest, Maryland, Georgia Tech, Colgate, Davidson and the two North Carolinas.

Duke's schedule was something of a guarantee that the Blue Devils would finish the season unbeaten, if it could get over the Tennessee game. Only the fact that the Eastern situation is scrambled won the bowl bid for Duke; that and the Pasadena people's eagerness to get at least some kind of an unbeaten club into their game.

Once-beaten Fordham and once-beaten Missouri will be battling in a meaningless sort of Sugar Bowl game at New Orleans. No suggestion of any sort of title rides on the contest, but the Sugar Bowl people were sort of smart in inviting Fordham. Fordham, because it is a New York school, guarantees publicity for the Sugar Bowl which, after all, is one of the big reasons for the game anyway.

Missouri Rates a Choice

Fordham's acceptance of the Sugar Bowl bill all but crossed the invitation in transit. The $75,000 guarantee the New Orleans people give is as much as the Rose Bowl nets the contenders and once-beaten Fordham was out of the running for the Pasadena invtation after its defeat by Pittsburgh, a team that had been walloped, 40-0, by Michigan and 39-0, by Minnesota.

Missouri rated some sort of a bowl bid, at that. The Missourians took a 12-7 licking from Ohio State in their first game of the season, and then bounced back to win all of their remaining eight games to take the Big Six title. In a pretty good league, Missouri was far the best.

Miami's Orange Bowl, which can't promise the same big dough as the California and New Orleans folks, came up with a smart sort of selection in the University of Georgia. Georgia lost to Alabama and was held to a tie by Mississippi, but the Bulldogs are good representatives for the deep South. T. C. U., twice beaten and once tied, is Georgia's opponent.

If the Miami people had been successful in matching the University of Texas with Georgia, they would have made the best of matters. Despite one defeat and a tie, Texas still has a reputation as one of football's powerhouses, with its big scores against strong Southwest opposition, and sort of reestablished itself by its 23-0 victory over a previously unbeaten Texas A. & M. team.

Cotton Bowl Loses Luster

The Cotton Bowl at Dallas lost some of its luster when Texas A. & M. went down before Texas. The defeat didn't cost Texas A. & M. the conference title, but it didn't do the Cotton Bowl game any good. The selection of Alabama, however, will tend to offset this. The Crimson Tide, though beaten by Vanderbilt, 7-0, and Mississippi State, 14-0, will present a colorful team. From a box-office standpoint, Alabama is definitely a "natural."

The Dallas Bowl has a glowing chance to increase its prestige, though, before the week is out. Texas A. & M. will meet Washington State on Saturday and the Dallas people could crow loudly if A. & M. won that one, because Washington State holds victories over both Oregon State and Stanford. But, as we were saying, there isn't a hint of a football epic on New Year's Day in any bowl.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

WHAT ABOUT THE BOWL PERFORMERS?

New York, Dec. 1.—A fan who thinks, along with me and a few others, that bowl players should share in those commercially minded gates, offers an interesting and humane footnote to the suggestion.

CONSIDINE

"From every bowl game pool," writes Reginald L. Lewis, of Columbia, Conn., 'there should be extracted 10 per cent annuity and hospitalization found which would guarantee each participant two things:

"A—Complete hospitalization for a period which would insure his complete cure and restoration of health.

"B—An annuity which would guarantee every player who has the misfortune to suffer a serious injury, causing him to become an invalid or cripple, the sum of $80 a month until such time as an impartial board pronounces the player able to earn a livelihood through his own abilities."

Lewis suggests that the annual college football conventions adopt this suggestion and create a board to control the money. Sounds reasonable to us. As far as we know, no Bowl player has received more than superficial knocks in recent years, but the law of averages is going to catch up with them eventually, for the games are hotly contested. Football, besides being a fine game, takes a toll of a dozen and more lives a year and results annually in one million dollars worth of doctors' bills and one million school hours lost by injured men and boys. These are not my figures, of course, but those of a studious committee which has been making a quiet annual report on the toll of the game for a decade.

Sooner or later some player is going to be hurt in a bowl. The colleges which accept those profitable bowl bids probably never will share their haul for undergrads who believe it is a great honor to play in these games in exchange of round-trip tickets and chow will always be in the majority. However, we think there should be some football workman's compensation plan to take care of those who crack up while giving their all to a Siwash which gives them nothing in return.

Cage Official Brightens Basketball

The art of umpiring, which promises to become a dead-pan, colorless profession with the retirement of Bill Klem, takes on a red corpuscle or two with the announcement that one of the embryo arbiters who will attend Bill McGowan's umpiring school at the University of Maryland will be Pat Kennedy. Kennedy, for the benefit of those who have never seen this apoplectic bloke work at Madison Square Garden's big basketball double-headers, is an outstanding court referee. When he calls a foul on a basketball player, or even invokes some simpler ruling, his eyes pop, his veins stand out, his voice emits the cry of a doomed soul and he gives off a series of gestures like a man fighting off a herd of bees in a revolving door through which Jesse Owen has just raced.

Pat worked in the Inter-State League last season, but feels he needs the touch of a master like McGowan. Bill, incidentally, has found jobs for 68 of his umpiring students. Two of his scholars, Bill McKinley and Ed Halstead, went up to the American Association this year, and McKinley will hit the big time before long.

2439 Yards for Mr. Dudley

Bill Dudley, Virginia's great halfback who has been or will be snubbed by many of the All-Americas, finished his season with a dazzling record of having gained 2439 yards. The thick-legged Bluefield, Va., bullet carried the ball 157 times for 957 yards, and completed 58 out of 107 passes for 857 yards. He ran punts back 451 yards, including an 89-yard runback against Lafayette—all of which put him up on top of the country's backfield men in the matter of miles gained. If he goes into pro football, he's a cinch to emulate Tuffy Leemans and make those experts wince who decided that he was just another local phenom. Maj. Bob Neyland is among a dozen outstanding coaches who swear he is the best halfback they've ever seen.

Smart Advise to Bill Conn

Billy Conn's next fight will be against Tony Zale, the new and only middleweight boss, and our advice to Will is not to expose himself unnecessarily. Nor his body. Zale is the cleanest body puncher that has come along in years. His sidearm curves to Georgia Abrams kidneys last Friday night did as much damage as his clean shots at Abrams' head. Abrams, a teetotaler, is certain to have kidney trouble, and tragically, without any of the attendant fun.

Minnesota Sweeps Poll; Duke Second

Big Ten Champions Get All But 12 of First-Place Votes: Notre Dame Third

By Bill Boni

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 1.—Minnesota's Golden Gophers capped off a tremendous season today by finishing at the top of the list in the final Associated Press football ranking poll of the regular campaign.

Bernie Bierman's powerhouse, never worse than second and that only once in the eight weeks of the poll, drew 84½ first-place votes out of a total of 96 in this tabulation. Only 12 of the country's gridiron experts did not place the Gophers a the head of their ballots, and one of them split the honors between Minnesota and second-place Duke, another of the season's three major all-winning teams and Oregon State's selection as its Rose Bowl rival on New Year's Day.

Minnesota, in retaining the position it won in 1940 and leading the poll for the third time since it was established on its present basis in 1936, did so by sweeping all before it in an eight-game schedule. The Western Conference titleholders opened with an intersectional triumph over the University of Washington, followed up by beating Illinois, Pittsburgh, Michigan, Northwestern, Nebraska and Iowa, and concluded with a smashing 41-6 rout of Wisconsin that gave the Gophers a record of 17 consecutive victories.

They Won Without Smith

One of the most remarkable features of this performance was that Minnesota did so with its captain and brilliant all-around back, Bruce Smith, on the sidelines for most of three key games.

De Correvont's Blast Called 'Ill-Advised'

Coach Lynn Waldorf brushed off the Bill De Correvont incident as the action of "a good boy who was ill-adivsed" while speaking before the Northwestern Club of Washington last night at the Kennedy-Warren Hotel.

The Wildcat coach touched briefly on the Nation-wide publicity following the radio address of the former Chicago high school star who last week was quoted as saying Waldorf "never developed my full potentialities as a football player" in a radio address.

"I never worked with a finer bunch of boys," Waldorf said, "and Bill was one of them. It is too bad he could not have ended his career by scoring three touchdowns against Illinois, which he did, rather than on this unfortunate incident."

It was gathered from a prominent Northwestern official at the dinner, however, that the radio broadcast was not all De Correvont's idea, but that he was led into it with the promise of lucrative compensation following the national publicity which was foreseen. The idea backfired, however, and De Correvont is taking the rap.

V. P. I. Selects James as Captain

Blacksburg, Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—William Wilson (Billy) James, of Hampton, Va., will lead the Virginia Tech football team in 1942. James was chosen captain-elect of the '42 Gobblers tonight by varsity lettermen at a meeting held prior to the annual banquet given the varsity squad and the Tech athletic staff by local Rotarians.

Eli Grid Captain Apparently Drives His Own Town Car

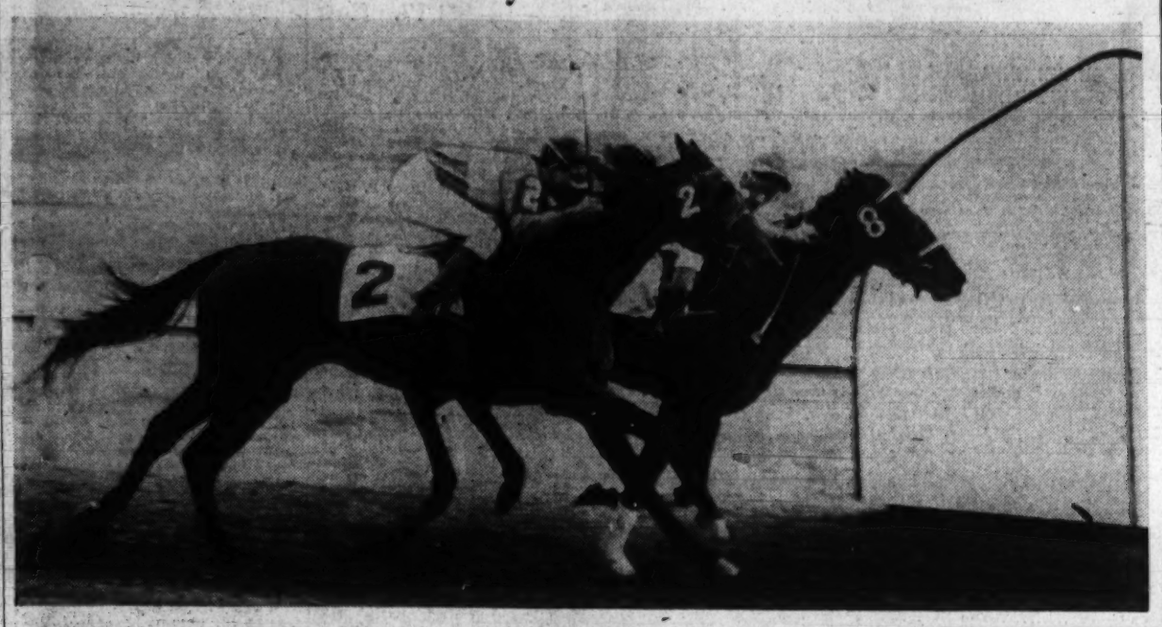
New Haven, Conn., Dec. 1.—Spencer D. Moseley, who was elected last Wednesday as captain of Yale's football team for the 1942 season, was arrested last night and charged with smashing the glass in a parking meter on York Street. In city court today, the arresting officer, Patrolman Thomas King, testified that he had witnessed Moseley smashing the meter and added that eight other parking meters in the immediate vicinity had also been destroyed.

Moseley, '42, '43, of Highland Park, Ill., was paroled for a hearing on Thursday. Elected captain last Wednesday, he played a consistently good game at center although he suffered a fractured jaw during the early preliminary practice period this fall and was forced to wear a jaw brace while playing. Patrolman King said that the breaking of parking meters has been popular with students at the college for the last few weeks.

A Close One for Royston Star at Charles Town



Glitter Girl (on rail) just managed to hold out and beat My Baby in the fourth race on yesterday's opening program at Charles Town (W. Va.) track. Jockey Bobby Root, on the winner, looks plenty worried about the lead which he had held all the way. A $10.80 mutuel was paid on Glitter Girl. (Story on Page 22.)

Texas Decides To Spurn Any Bids to Bowls

By the Associated Press

Austin, Tex., Dec. 1.—The University of Texxas Longhorns, 23-0 conquerors of the Southwest Conference champion Texas A. and M. Eleven, today voted to decline any and all possible invitations to postseason and bowl games.

The decision was disclosed by Coach Dana X. Bible after a lengthy dressing-room conference with the squad behind closed doors.

Orange Bowl officials at Miami, Fla., had admitted unofficially the Texas team, one of the top-ranking clubs in the Nation, had been invited to play Georgia, already chosen, in the January 1 contest but no formal admission of the bid came from the Longhorns, coaches or officials of the big State school.

"The boys have made up their minds to decline any and all offers and invitations to bowl or postseason games, Bible said. "Now we will go to work to prepare for the Oregon team whom we meet here Saturday to close our regular schedule.

"The late date with the Webfoots already has stretched out our regular season by some 10 days and the boys took that into consideration when they decided to hang up their togs as a team after that game."

Midwest Dominates INS All-America

Albert, Lach, Smith and Westfall Are Named In Backfield; Virginia's Dudley on 2d Team

By John Henry

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Dec. 1.—Eleven players who rose to heights of stardom from the turbulence and turmoil of the 1941 football campaign today were listed on the All-America team as selected by International News Service.

Five of them hail from the Midwest, two from the South, two from the Pacific Coast, one from the Southwest and one from the East. The I. N. S. All-America would line up as follows:

Ends—Holt Rast (Alabama) and Bob Dove (Notre Dame).

Tackles—Bob Reinhard (California) and Dick Wildung (Minnesota).

Center—Vince Banois (Detroit).

Halfbacks—Steve Lach (Duke) and Bruce Smith (Minnesota).

Fullback—Bob Westfall (Michigan).

Selected in a poll of International News Service bureaus throughout the Nation, the All-America team, individually, possesses all the science and sock to be required of the rest in the land. Collectively, the team would embrace a rugged line, averaging about 200 pounds in

Bobo Loses Tough Fight To Bettina

Pittsburgh, Dec. 1. — Although floored for a nine-count in the tenth and final round, Melio Bettina, of New York, former light-heavweight champion, scored his twenty-eighth consecutive ring victory tonight over Harry Bobo, giant Pittsburgh Negro slugger.

Bettina, who weighed 183, or 21½ pounds less than his opponent, carried the fight to the Negro from the start, making the contest one of the best heavyweight brawls witnessed here.

T. C. U. to Face Georgia in Orange Bowl

By the United Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 7.—Twice beaten and once tied Texas Christian University, which has conquered seven major football teams this season, including Texas, will meet the University of Georgia in the Orange Bowl here on New Year's day, it was announced tonight.

Bowl President W. G. Ward made the announcement a few hours after Texas had declined a similar bid to play here. Georgia accepted the invitation Saturday.

T. C. U. will be making its fourth appearance in six years in a bowl game—and has yet to lose a postseason encounter. The Horned Frogs last appeared in a New Year's Day game in the Sugar Bowl in 1939 when they trimmed Carnegie Tech, 15-7.

Howard Grubb, T. C. U. team manager, telephoned the Horned Frogs' acceptance to the Orange Bowl committee and said Southwest Conference officials had approved the game.

This year, T. C. U.'s vaunted attack, which has clocked only spasmodically, reached its peak when it turned back the then No. 1 team of the Nation, Texas, 14-7. In its last start, T. C. U. nosed out Southern Methodist, 15-13, the Frogs have lost to the Texas Aggies, 14-0, and Fordham, 28-14. Rice tied them 0-0.

T. C. U. started off the season slowly with a 6-0 win over Tulsa, picked up steam to take Arkansas, 9-0, and Indiana, 20-14, lost to the Texas Aggies and Fordham, rebounded to win from Baylor, 23-12; Centenary, 35-7, and Texas before the Rice and S. M. U. games.

Leading the opposing Georgia Bulldog team will be All-American Frankie Sinkwich, the broken-jawed halfback sensation who has led his team to its best record since 1928. Georgia has lost only to Alabama, 28-14, and was tied by Mississippi, 14-14. Numbered among the Bulldogs' eight victims have been Dartmouth, Columbia, Georgia Tech, Florida, Auburn and South Carolina. They also won over Mercer and Centre.

Virginia Alumni Honor Gridmen This Saturday

Frank Murray, the coach who almost led University of Virginia's football team to its first undefeated season in history, will be the principal speaker Saturday night at a smoker of the Washington chapter of the University Alumni Association. The event will start at 8 o'clock in the Willard Room of the Willard Hotel.

Other honored guests will include the entire Virginia coaching staff, members of the varsity from Washington and vicinity and prep and high school players from nearby who played on The Washington Post's All-Metropolitan team in Richmond's Tobacco Bowl last Saturday.

Virginia missed that undefeated season after a three-touchdown foray by Yale in the last half. Yale won, 21-19. At Saturday's meeting motion pictures of the Cavaliers' victory over North Carolina will be shown. All alumni are invited.

Wisconsin Cagers Win Opener, 56-33

Madison, Wis., Dec. 1 (AP).—Wisconsin launched its 1941-1942 basketball campaign tonight with a 56-to-33 victory over a stubborn Carroll College team from Waukesha, Wis.

Carroll made a scrap of it early in the game, but the Badgers, last year's Western Conference and N. C. A. A. champions, warmed up enough to build up a 23-to-15 advantage at half time.

Tide, Beaten Twice, Takes Dallas Bid

Aggies Entering Bowl for Second Year in Row, Still Have Game to Play

By the Associated Press

Dallas, Dec. 1.—Colorful Alabama—the famed Crimson Tide that swept to three Rose Bowl triumphs—is coming to Dallas to play Texas A. & M., champions of the Southwest Conference.

It will be a Cotton Bowl date January 1.

The Tide, twice beaten this season but still boasting a strong record, today accepted "with pleasure" the invitation from Dan D. Rogers, president of the Cotton Bowl Athletic Association.

The Aggies last night accepted an invitation to be the host team. They were invited automatically more than a week ago upon becoming conference champions.

Negotiations with Alabama were concluded this afternoon between Rogers and Chancellor George H. Denny.

Happy Over Decision

Rogers was enthusiastic over obtaining Alabama.

"The decision was reached after a very close study of the schedules played by various teams under consideration and we are of the opinion that Alabama's season record was among the very best," he said. "They have a very colorful ball team and we are mighty happy to have them here as an opponent of Texas A. and M. College."

Alabama lost two games out of ten, one to Mississippi State, 14-0, and the other to Vanderbilt, 7-0. Victories include Tennessee, Georgia, Tulane and Georgia Tech.

The Aggies have lost one game and complete their regular schedule this week. They left tonight for Tacoma, Wash., to play Washington State Saturday. The lone defeat on their record was at the hands of Texas last Thursday.

Alabama will be the second Southern team to play in the Cotton Bowl since it was inaugurated six years ago. The first was Clemson, which defeated Boston College, 6-3, in 1940.

The First Cotton Bowl Game

Texas Christian Universtiy and Marquette were the first teams in the Cotton Bowl, the Texans winning, 16-6, in 1937.

Rice won over Colorado, 28-14, in 1938; St. Mary's defeated Texas Tech, 20-13, in 1939, and last January 1 A. and M. downed Fordham, 13-12.

Alabama was five times in the Rose Bowl but never has appeared in any other Bowl. The Tide beat Washington, 20-19, in 1926 at Pasadena; tied Stanford, 7-7, in 1927; won over Washington State, 24-0, in 1931; lost to Stanford, 29-13, in 1935, and was defeated by California, 13-0, in 1938.

The teams' records:

A. and M. victories—34-0 over Sam Houston State, 41-0 over Texas A. and I., 49-7 over New York U., 14-0 over Texas Christian, 48-0 over Baylor, 7-0 over Arkansas, 21-10 over Southern Methodist, 19-6 over Rice.

Defeats—23-0 by Texas.

Alabama victories—47-6 over Southwestern, La.; 61-0 over Howard, 9-2 over Tennessee, 27-14 over Georgia, 30-0 over Kentucky, 19-14 over Tulane, 20-0 over Georgia Tech, 21-7 over Miami.

Defeats—14-0 by Mississippi State, 7-0 by Vanderbilt.

Jack Scores T.K.O. Over Sammy River

New York, Dec. 1 (INS).—Beau Jack, Augusta, Ga., Negro, defeated Sammy River, New York, tonight, winning on a technical knockout in the third round of their scheduled eight-rounder.

In the top preliminary on the Ridgewood Arena card, Jackie Cooper, Chicago, kayoed Mike Angieri, New York, in the fifth round.

Dulie Takes Camera Decision in Charles Town Race Opener

Favorite Beats Out Bold Risk

6000 See Initial Card Under Ideal Conditions; Double Pays $153 for $2

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 1. After an absence of five months, thoroughbred horse racing returned to this friendly race track this afternoon and provided a feature race that proved a thriller from start to finish.

In a blanket finish, a fitting end to the Inaugural Purse, C. M. Feltner's Dulie took a narrow decision over Mrs. W. B. Arndt's Bold Risk. The camera aided the judges in separating them and showed the son of Dunlin and Julie had a neck the best of it. A half length farther back came Henry L. Strauss' Scout About to be third.

A crowd of 6000 saw the sport conducted under ideal conditions with both favorites and long shots having their innings. In the day's feature, it was a public choice that carried off the prize. Dulie was odds-on in the betting and paid a $3.60 mutuel which his backers considered a good return although the margin of the Feltner gelding's victory belied the pay-off price.

The track was fast and in excellent shape, with a cushion. Supper Show was first to show in front when Starter John Morrissey sent the group of eight away for the battle of a mile and a sixteenth. Dulie was close up with Sir S. third and Scout About fourth as the field came into the stretch the first time around.

Jockey A. Lo Turco had a good grip on Dulie at this stage and he was saving ground with the veteran. On the swing for the stretch, Supper Show began to show signs of wear and tear. With Supper Show out of the way, Lo Turco sent Dulie to the top and Scout About rallied along with the ultimate winner. Dulie finally shook off Scout About, but met a new challenger in Bold Risk. In the final jumps, Bold Risk was wearing down Dulie.

The winner, a popular horse, on this track, was clocked in 1:47 1-5 for the long route.

For the most part the racing was close, the camera being called into action with regularity. The sixth race was an exception, Duchess Del, saddled by Tom Lewis, running off with this event by ten lengths.

The program brought a $153.20 pay-off in the daily double. Ring Up, racing for J. L. Friedman, won the second event and paid $29.40. Corsica was second and Zac Pam was third. In the third race Indian Sea lasted to win by a head from Two Ply and rewarded his scattered backers with a $24.80 mutuel. Third money in this field went to Persian Queen.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BERWYN, $3.00, $2.40, $2.20; BUTTERMAN, $2.60, $2.20; HIGHLAND SONG, $2.80.

BERWYN rushed on the outside to take a short lead over BUTTERMAN, was steadied when attempting to run out at the stretch turn and rallied to hard riding to win going away. BUTTERMAN saved ground, took a brief lead entering the stretch and weakened in the final test. HIGHLAND SONG was hard ridden and had no excuses. HARD LOSER could not reach contention. MAGIC HILL flashed speed and stopped. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:07. Off at 2:08. Winner, J. L. Friedman's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—RING UP, $29.40, $11.40, $8.60; CORSICA, $20.60, $9.40; ZAC PAM, $4.60.

RING UP assumed command going into the first turn, drew out after shaking off BRAXTON BELLE was put to pressure when challenged by CORSICA and barely lasted. CORSICA was within striking distance from the start, responded when placed to a drive and was wearing down the winner at the end. ZAC PAM was steadied early, rallied mildly after saving ground turning for home and then weakened. BRAXTON BELLE was hard ridden while closest to the pacemaker and tired gradually after 3 furlongs.

THIRD RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $600; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:34. Off at 2:35. Winner, J. K. Marinetti's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—INDIAN SEA, $24.80, $7.60, $4.40; TWO PLY, $3.40, $2.40; PERSIAN QUEEN, $3.60.

INDIAN QUEEN saved ground while setting the early pace, came to the inside entering the stretch and held sway to the end under punishment. TWO PLY was rated close up, had a brief lead approaching the stretch, had to be taken up while attempting to run out at the final turn and hung in the concluding drive. PERSIAN QUEEN was sluggish early and closed some ground under pressure. DARK ACE was in close quarters going to the first turn and came willingly at the end.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GLITTER GIRL, $10.80, $6.00, $4.40; MY BABY, $17.20, $9.80; CROISSANT, $3.60.

GLITTER GIRL sprinted into the lead in the opening furlong, drew out, but had to be shaken up to hold MY BABY safe. The latter was within striking distance from the start, responded when put to a drive and was wearing down the winner at the end. CROISSANT was hard ridden, lost ground entering the stretch and weakened thereafter. STREAMER could not keep up early and came with good energy at the close.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:30½. Off at 3:31. Winner, C. M. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DULIE, $3.60, $3.00, $2.40; BOLD RISK, $3.60, $3.20; SCOUT ABOUT, $5.60.

DULIE was steadied while racing forwardly on the inside during the early stages, responded when shaken up to take a brief lead and held sway to the end under strong handling. BOLD RISK moved to contention after a half, came wide for racing room entering the stretch and was wearing down the winner at the close. SCOUT ABOUT moved up menacingly in the stretch drive and faltered in the final sixteenth. TYR, last away, worked his way to contention, was blocked entering the stretch and tired thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place easily. Went to post at 4:01. Off at 4:01½. Winner, N. S. Ryder's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUCHESS DEL, $7.80, $3.40, $2.60; GROUCHER'S BOY, $2.60, $2.40; IDLE NIGHT, $3.60.

DUCHESS DEL took command at once without being extended, widened her margin gradually and was just breezing through the final eighth. GROUCHER'S BOY, always in nearest pursuit of the winner, held on gamely when placed to pressure, but was no match for the winner. IDLE NIGHT was within striking distance early, but flattened out when hard ridden. IVY X. made several moves, but could not seriously threaten.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $500; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:30. Off at 4:30. Winner, A. A. Baldwin's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALAMODE, $13.00, $5.60, $2.40; SIR BROADSIDE, $4.20, $2.20; LEGAL LIGHT, $2.20.

ALAMODE, always a forward factor, assumed command after a half, drew out and had to be shaken up to resist SIR BROADSIDE. The latter was off very slowly, was shut off after a half, saved ground thereafter and was in close quarters on the inside of the winner approaching the finish. LEGAL LIGHT was well placed, hard ridden and had no excuses. THE LOOM passed tired horses in the closing stages.

Gophers Voted Tops in Nation

ham, gave the Gophers their only serious contention in this weeks' poll. With 9½ first-place votes, they got a total of 752½ points to 945½ for Minnesota (out of a possible 980).

Third place went to Notre Dame, which finished undefeated but once-tied in its first season under Frank Leahy and got 675 points. The only other undefeated team in the balloting—the all-conquering Duquesne eleven—slipped from fifth place a week ago to eighth, possibly because the Dukes lost some of the limelight through finishing their regular season unusually early.

Texas, tumbled to tenth place last week after its tie with Baylor and loss to Texas Christian, regained considerable prestige and vaulted up to fourth by knocking Texas A. & M. out of the unbeaten class. The Aggies, in consequence, dropped back from second to fourth.

Remainder of Circle

The rest of the first ten consisted of Michigan, which tied Ohio State for runner-up spot in the Western Conference (the Buckeyes were ranked thirteenth); Fordham, which with 329 2-3 points had an edge of one and two-thirds over its Sugar Bowl opponent, Missouri, and Navy, the East's Ivy League champion, which took tenth place.

Oregon State's Pacific Coast Conference champions and Rose Bowl entry could earn no better than twelfth position from the experts, while Georgia, voted into the Orange Bowl, drew fourteenth, and Alabama, invited by Texas A. and M. to the Cotton Bowl, a mere six points for twentieth place.

The standing of the teams (first-place votes in parentheses, points figured on the 10-9-8-7-6, etc., basis):

FIRST TEN

1. Minnesota (84½) 945 1-2
2. Duke (9½) 725 1-2
3. Notre Dame 675
4. Texas (1) 494 2-3
5. Michigan 455
6. Fordham 329 2-3
7. Missouri (1) 328
8. Duquesne 309 2-3
9. Texas A. and M. 229 2-3
10. Navy 220 2-3

SECOND TEN—11, Northwestern, 167; 12, Oregon State, 133 2-3; 13, Ohio State, 81; 14, Georgia, 62 2-3; 15, Pennsylvania, 61 2-3; 16, Mississippi State, 13 2-3; 17, Mississippi, 10; 18, Tennessee, 8; 19, Washington State, 7; 20, Alabama, 6.

ALSO RAN—Virginia and Texas Tech, 3 each; Penn State, 2; Texas Christian, Washington, Harvard and Tulane, 1 each.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

I understand my flamingos have enlisted in national defense. At least, the lead birds have been melted down and now may be part of a tank or a plane. That's O. K. with me. I was getting kind of tired of them giving me the bird. Brother William P. Cox said the B. & O. special brought up more than 500 fans from Washington yesterday. Jockey Sammy Palumbo appears to be in good shape. He was down to 112 pounds for the opening day. For the first time horses are being allowed to work out on the way to the post. I have advocated this, and everyone is pleased. The new outrider is Lee Bushong, of Woodstock, Va. Jockey Beverly Hacker is here, but he says he is vacationing and will not ride 'umtil New Orleans opens. Jockey Johnny Harrell changed his mind and did not report here. He will wait for the Florida season. Braxton Bell tossed Jockey Glidewell at the post, and somebody said he looked more like Jockey Tallspin. Glidewell is a good boy, however. He rode his first winner last May 3 and has 70 winners to his credit now. Another lad likely to be heard from at this meeting is Joe Dattilo, the leading rider during the meeting at Rockingham. He rode his first winner last June 5 and now has 75 on the books. Walter Haight, the colt, was entered for today's program, but proved unlucky in the draw along with 29 other 2-year-olds. By the way, there are 75 jockeys here. John Boland, in charge of colors here, says he has 500 sets to take care of. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—SAMPLER performed in fair fashion on the Maryland milers and is the natural choice in this field. SOFT AND CLEAR gets in light and promises to be prominent. MATHORA belongs in the money circle.

Second race—SUN MONIA is a doubtful starter, but will be the winner if taken off the reserve list. Needs only to run back to that Bowie race. STADIUM is a fair sort and is dangerous. APPREHEND for the minor money.

Third race—MARANDAN likes this track and appears well placed. I'm going to string along with this one. SCHLEY AL is fit and ready for the best, but is a doubtful starter. WHIP-AWAY to take care of the others.

Fourth race—LOVE MARK may have some trouble with the turns. However, I'm going to be there. ACCIDENTAL should go well in this company. WAKE will like the distance.

Fifth race—ROMAN BOY is a champion around here. Gets his favorite 4½ furlongs for this and I see no reason for mistakes. NEVER HOME was good here last summer and is dangerous. DUSTY DUNLIN has shown good speed on the milers.

Sixth race—JUNGLE MOON comes off a good effort at Bowie and deserves the top ranking in this field. Needs only the right ride. YANKEE LAD is in fair shape and will be a factor. MR. JIMMIE to account for the show end.

Seventh race—RICHESTAN ran well in New England nad gets the call in this event. DIABROOM set the pace in his last in Maryland and is a threat. SOME GROUCHER loves the track.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take REMOLEE, MISS KSAR and DOCTOR'S NURSE.

Alsab Ready To Campaign As 3-Year-Old

By the Associated Press

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1.—Hard-working Alsab, winner of more horse races than most blue-blooded 2-year-olds ever run, is almost certain to open the 3-year-old campaign before the winter is out.

Mrs. Al Sabath's bay colt received a champion's welcome at Hialeah Park today, but while the greeting still was in progress it was revealed that the stay in Florida won't be all vacation.

"I see no reason why Alsab won't run here this winter," Sabath declared. "The horse thrives on work and if he trains all right we will send him to the post during the Hialeah meeting.

Alsab is eligible both for the $25,000 Flamingo Stakes, a 3-year-old fixture, and the $50,000 Widener Handicap.

Several hundred persons waited almost two hours for the arrival of the train bearing the $700 wonder colt from Lexington, Ky., where it was allowed to let down from the strain of the summer.

On hand for the occasion was John C. Clark, president of Hialeah Park.

"Alsab shipped in wonderful shape," Sabath reported. "He does not mind train rides, and in fact lay down most of the trip here from Lexington.

"He will be put in light training soon, and if he comes along all right, he'll run at Hialeah."

Alsab will become 3 years old January 1—the official birthday of all race horses. As a 2-year-old he was entered in 22 races, won 15, placed in 3, showed in 1 and collected $110,810.

Pro Grid Title Game Set Dec. 21 If Bears Win Sunday

West Section Play-Off Set For Dec. 14

Layden Announces 'Sudden-Death' Plan To Settle Packer-Bear Possible Deadlock

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—The National Professional Football League today set December 21 for its East-West league championship game, with the possibility a play-off may be necessary to decide which Western Division team will meet the New York Giants for the title.

The Giants have scored a clean sweep of the Eastern half of the league, chalking up eight wins and two losses to the six and four of their nearest competitor, Brooklyn. New York and Brooklyn are matched in a final game next Sunday, but the outcome will not affect the division standing.

"Sudden Death" Play-off

In the Western Division, the Green Bay Packers have ended their schedule with ten wins and a single loss, but they will be tied with the Chicago Bears if the latter defeat the Windy City's Cardinals next Sunday. The Bears now have won nine and lost one.

Should the Bears move into a Western division tie with the Packers, Commissioner Elmer Layden said a "sudden death" play-off for the division title would be staged between them and Green Bay team at Wrigley Field, Chicago, December 14. The game would go into as many extra periods as necessary to determine the winner, he explained.

If the score is tied at the end of the fourth quarter, there will be a three-minute intermission and the teams again will toss for the privilege of kicking or receiving. Then will follow as many 15-minute periods as are necessary for one team to score, the game ending as soon as there is a score. The divisional championship thus could be decided by a field goal or safety as late as the sixth "quarter."

All-Star Game Set

The national championship game will be held at Green Bay, Wisc., if the Packers take Western division honors, Layden added, while in the event of a Bear victory, the game will go to the latter's home grounds at Wrigley Field.

The commissioner also announced the annual game between the National League champion and the All-Stars will be played this year in Los Angeles, either the last week in December or the first in January. A definite date will be selected later.

Weekly Stopped By Fritzie Zivic In Ninth Round

Cleveland, Ohio Dec. 1.—Fritzie Zivic of Pittsburgh, former world welterweight champion, tonight scored a technical knockout over Harry Weekly of New Orleans in the ninth round of their scheduled ten-round bout.

The fight drew a crowd of 12,000 to the Cleveland News Christmas Fund show. Weekly held Zivic even for six rounds, but then Fritzie opened up and had his opponent hanging on helplessly at the finish.

Pitcher Cornicki Bought by Bucs

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—Henry Cornicki, lanky right-handed pitcher who won one and lost one for the St. Louis Cardinals last season, was bought tonight by the Pittsburgh Pirates in a straight cash deal.

President William E. Benswanger of the Pirates said he and Manager Frankie Frisch agreed on the purchase after a conference with Vice President Branch Rickey of St. Louis and Cardinal Manager Billy Southworth. Benswanger declined to disclose the purchase price.

Cornicki joined the Cardinals last spring after winning 19 and losing 10 for Rochester in the International League. He participated in five games this year, pitching in 13 innings. He was sold last season by the Canadians to the Chicago Cubs, but the deal was canceled by Commissioner Landis.

D. C.'s Only 6-Man School Grid Team—and Coach

Veteran of 17 Years Coaching, Wannan Is Pioneer in Game for Short-Handed Squads

By Jack Kearney, Jr.

Sidwell-Friends School's six-man football team's recent loss to Shepherdstown High, of West Virginia, brings its record for the three years it had had six-man football to 11 victories in 14 games.

Previously this year, the team won over Stuyvesant, of Warrenton, Va., twice, and Brooklyn Friends, of New York.

The team is coached by Charles (Pop) Wannan, who had been at the school for 17 years. "Pop" was an athletic director at the Y. M. C. A. before that and it was through his work at the "Y" that he saw the need for games being adapted to the size and age of the boys playing it. That is the reason that in 1939 he organized a six-man football team at Friends, which usually has a young, light squad.

A Chat Started It

This newest stage of football evolution, which so far has consisted of soccer, rugby and 11-man football, resulted from a conversation in 1934 between Stephen Epler, now chairman of the National Six-Man Football Rules Committee, and Dean Moomey, superintendent of the Chester (Nebr.) Public School.

Moomey explained why regular football was impractical for smaller schools. Epler suggested altering the rules to bring about a more balanced situation and developed his idea during the following spring and summer. In December, 1934, he and Coach W. H. Roselius, of Hebron College, met with two other men at Lincoln, Nebr., and formulated the code now in use.

The first game of six-man football was made possible by Coach Roselius, who donated equipment and the use of Hebron's field, where on September 28, 1934, the game officially came into existence.

Among the 60 or more changes in the regular football rules, the following stand out:

Positions Vary

The team consists of two ends, a center, a quarter, half and full back. On any play players may change positions, so that on one play you might have the same lad playing center who played fullback the play before and who may play end on the next play.

A pass may be thrown from any point back of the line of scrimmage. If a pass is blocked and does not cross the line of scrimmage, it may be advanced by either team.

20 Per Cent Play

A recent survey by Epler shows that of the 4909 high schools in the United States that have football teams, better than 20 per cent are playing six-man football. These figures, compared with those of 1934, in which fewer than 50 teams participated, represent its remarkable growth.

It has already surpassed swimming, boxing, soccer and wrestling as an interscholastic sport.

However, this new brand of football is not intended to take the place of the 11-man type. It is merely to provide a game suited to schools with insufficient material, or financial strength to maintain an 11-man football team.

Any player is eligible to receive a pass. One of the standard plays used is one on which all six men handle the ball. The playing field is only 80 yards long and 40 yards wide, against 100 yards long and 53 yards wide for the more popular gridiron.

The method of scoring is, a touchdown, 6 points; conversion by kick, 2 points; by a pass or run, 1 point; a field goal, 4 points, and a safety, 2 points.

A team is given four downs to make 15 yards.

Frank Leahy, who last Saturday became the first man to coach an undefeated Notre Dame football team since the immortal Knute Rockne's 1930 team says: "Six-man football, in my opinion, is a very healthy adjutant to the fall pastime. It is particularly helpful to college coaches in that it will serve as an incubator for future collegiate stars. It is a well-known fact that many of the greatest football players in the Nation come from small towns. With it, some of the smallest schools would have been able to field teams during the past decade or two. Many of the schools were too small to form a regular squad, and six-man football is the answer. It is needed more and more to enable more boys than ever to participate in this great fall pastime."

Coast Hails Selection of Duke and Wade

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 1.—Jubilation was hardly the keynote of the sports page reaction to the invitation extended Duke University to play Oregon State in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day

Target for most of the comment was not the undefeated and untied Duke eleven, but its Coach, Wallace Wade, who will be making his fifth trip to the Pasadena bowl as a mentor.

Widespread speculation developed over the possibilities of filling the 90,000 capacity stadium. Most observers predicted it would be another sellout—a prediction based on the theory that Rose Bowl color and tradition would attract the throng no matter who played.

One long-range weather forecast seemed assured. The atmosphere will be slightly on the frigid side the morning Coach Wade steps off the train with his team and confronts the Los Angeles writing contingent.

The "Nave Incident"

Mr. Wade and the Los Angeles critics became estranged, so to speak, after the Duke-Southern California Rose Bowl game in 1939. Prominent in the situation was the now famous "Nave incident." Mr. Wade, according to the oft-exhumed story, neglected or declined to shake hands with Doyle Nave, the U. S. C. player whose pass in the final minute of the game defeated Duke.

A semblance of an olive branch was extended today, however, by George T. Davis, sports editor of the Los Angeles Evening Herald and Express. He expressed great surprise over the Duke selection, recalled that Wade on his last visit indicated he would not care to return to the Rose Bowl, added that, "It is known that Oregon State previously tried to sign Fordham or Missouri," but wound up:

A "Sound Selection"

Duke has a fine club and it is up to us to bring out the welcome mat to receive our guests cordially. Something like, 'Hi, Wally, glad to have you with us again.'"

David J. Walsh, of the Los Angeles Examiner, said Duke was "a sound selection in view of its record," while Paul Zimmerman, sports editor of the Los Angeles Times, wrote:

"It's no use getting mad at the Sugar Bowl people. They have the right setup. They have a show to sell and they sell it in business-like fashion."

The annual Times post-card Rose Bowl, as of yesterday, had Duke in sixth place in the public's informal popularity poll, with Missouri, Fordham, Texas A. and M. and Texas high in the first four.

G. U. Day Will Help 'Sell' 'Skins' Finale

The Redskins, who since 1935 have been in a battle for the Eastern Division championship of the National Pro League in the last game of the season, will instead mark Georgetown Day Sunday when the Philadelphia Eagles visit in the little-at-stake finale.

The Redskins must win while the Dodgers lose to the New York Giants at the Polo Grounds to share second place with the Brooklyn club and figure in the share of the play-off purse which goes to the runner-up team in each section. If this happens, both teams will finish with six victories and five defeats.

Five former Hoyas now in the pro ranks will be honored and presented with gifts from the student body, while another, Al Matuza, will be playing the season out with the Bears.

The visiting Eagles have three Georgetown boys on the squad and Jim Castiglia, one of the rookie standouts of the year, will be at the fullback position in the starting line-up. Joe Frank and Lou Ghecas are other members of the Eagles.

Augie Lio, who scored a touchdown and kicked three extra points in the Detroit Lions' final game on Sunday, and who gained All-American honors last year at Georgetown, will make a special trip here for the ceremonies.

Clem Stralka, who has been a Redskin standout at his guard position all season, will represent the Washington club.

The Georgetown University band will take part in honoring the Hoyas with pre-game and between-the-half music.

The committee in charge will be Bill Finn, president of the yard; Frank Prial 2d, senior class president; Buddy O'Grady, captain of the basketball team; Julian Carr assistant sports editor, and Al Blozis, the All American tackle candidate. Father John J. Kehoe, faculty moderator of athletics, and Rome Schwagel, graduate manager of athletics, sponsored the program.

The Redskins realize the Eagles will not be easy as in Shibe Park the Philadelphians scored 14 quick points against the 'Skins, as they did against the Bears, before losing, 17-14, to Sammy Baugh's last-quarter passes.

The Redskin office has 19,000 seats on sale.

Harvard Stars Accept Bids to Shrine Game

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Two Harvard stars, Loren MacKinney, an end, and Endicott (Chub) Peabody, a guard, were included today among the 20 college seniors who have accepted invitations to play on the Eastern squad in the Shriners' East-West charity game at San Francisco New Year's Day

The list of players was announced by W. F. Coffman, of San Francisco, director of the game, who said that a back, a center and a guard would be added to make the full roster of 23 men.

The others who have accepted are:

Backs—Bruce Smith, Minnesota; Bill DeCorrevont, Northwestern; Steve Juzwik, Notre Dame; Bob Westfall, Michigan; Thornley Wood, Columbia; Bill Geyer, Colgate; Bill Smaltz and Len Krouse, Penn State; Al Coupee, Iowa.

Center—Bob Ingalls, Michigan.

Guard—Ralph Fife, Pittsburgh.

Tackles—Alf Bauman, Northwestern, 212 pounds; Jim Daniell, Ohio State (who also can play guard), 229 pounds; Ernie Blandin, Tulane, 239 pounds; Urban Odson, Minnesota, 247 pounds.

Ends—Charles Ringer, Minnesota; John Kovatch, Notre Dame; Stan Gervelis, Pittsburgh.

The squad, to be coached by Andy Kerr, of Colgate; Bernie Bierman, of Minnesota, and Dud Degroot, of Rochester, will assemble at Chicago December 18 and leave for California the following day. Their first workouts in the West will be held on the University of California campus, their later ones at Sunnyvale, with the Moffett Field Army team providing the practice opposition.

It's Winter: Ski Club Will Hold Meeting Tonight

Winter is here. The Ski Club of Washington holds its first meeting of the year tonight at 8:15 in the Palisades Field House, just west of the 5100 block of Conduit Road Northwest.

The club will hear a report on progress in construction of a ski tow at New Germany, in Garrett County, Md., and will be reminded of the Whiskey Hollow Trail there—"one of the finest expert ski trails in the East."

In addition there will be skiing motion pictures. Ski enthusiasts are invited.

First Manor Hunt Set for Wednesday

The Manor Hunt will hold its first meeting of the month Wednesday from its kennels near Layhill, in Montgomery County, Md.

Other fixtures for the month are: December 6, Charles Bailey's farm; December 10, kennels; December 13, Mrs. Eleanor Lambeer's farm; December 17, kennels; December 20, Thomas Leibig's farm; Christmas Day, Mr. and Mrs. Merton English's Barberry Bend; December 27, James Cashell's farm, and December 31, kennels.

All meets are at 2:30 in the afternoon except the Christmas fixture, which will be at 10 a. m. C. Boyd Keys is master of hounds.

Belk Is Named Head Of Horsemen's Guild

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 1 (AP).—J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va., today was elected president of the National Horsemen's Guild, succeeding Gordon H. Pearce, of Monkton, Md., who resigned. Pearce was named honorary president.

Belk called a joint meeting of the guild and the Maryland Horsemen's Protective Association, of which he also is president, for December 10 in Charles Town.

Baseball Heads Talk Much, but Trade Nothing

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 1.—There was lots of talk and little accomplishment today as the baseball bosses jammed the lobby of their headquarters hotel to overflowing and carried their huddles out onto the sidewalks and into nearby restaurants.

For the most part the conversation did not involve trades, although the Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals had a secretive session during the afternoon in the Cardinals" room at a hotel a couple of blocks away from the main show in the George Washington.

President Bill Benswanger and Manager Frank Frisch were seeking a pitcher, but details of their sparring with President Sam Breadon and Manager Billy Southworth of the Red Birds were carefully concealed.

Larry MacPhail, president of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who came here with the announced intention of making some swaps and using something close to a quarter of a million dollars as a lure, said he had not yet held a single conference concerning a trade although he had been busy ironing out affairs of the Dodgers' farm operations.

Camilli Rumors

Some of the talk had to do with reports that the Dodgers held waivers on their star first baseman, Dolph Camilli, the most valuable player in the National League last season.

Warren Giles, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds, and Bob Quinn, president of the Boston Braves, agreed that the present waiver rule which would permit such stars to be traded outside the league was largely a farce.

Quinn proposed as a solution that the waiver price be raised to $10,000 or $12,500 from the present $7500 so that clubs would be willing to let go of players who were claimed instead of withdrawing their names when other clubs put in a bid.

"It's got so there is no use claiming a player any more because they won't give him to you if you do," he snorted. "Nobody would give up a major league ballplayer for $7500 unless he had only one leg."

Plan Waiver Reduction

Giles said he believed a good idea would be to raise the price for interleague waiver claims and reduce it to perhaps $6000 for sending a player to the minors, thus forcing the clubs to show their intentions.

Giles said that the Reds had cooled off on a deal for Outfielder Don Padgett, of the Cardinals, and that he didn't know what direction their trading efforts might take, although he was seeking a power-hitting outfielder.

Elsewhere it was learned that the Reds were offering Pitcher Whitey Moore and a choice among their present outer gardeners as bait for a deal.

Most of the major league clubs were represented on the scene today, but a few stragglers were not to arrive until tomorrow.

'Babe' Does His Own Batting—in Movie

New York, Dec. 1 (INS).—When the life of Lou Gehrig is filmed there'll be no one pinch-hitting for Babe Ruth.

The one-time Sultan of Swat, Samuel Goldwyn Productions announced today, has signed to play himself in the forthcoming movie dealing with the life of the late Yankee first baseman who with Ruth formed a home-run combination that has never been equaled in the major leagues.

'Untz' Brewer to Apply For Terp Coaching Job

Former Local Grid Star Feels He Could Succeed at Maryland

By Jack Munhall

Brooke (Untz) Brewer, one of the cityB's all-time great track and football athletes, last night announced that he would apply for the position of head football coach at his alma mater, the University of Maryland.

Brewer, a College Park graduate of 1922 and perhaps the Terps' most widely publicized football star, came into the picture unexpectedly. Friends revealed his desire for a try at the Maryland coaching job, which is known to be open, and by telephone Brewer confirmed it.

"I haven't made formal application yet," he said, "and I don't know if they would consider me, but I believe I could make a success of it."

Brewer, whose successful 54-yard dropkick here in a 1923 sandlot game is one of the longest on record, played football for Maryland when President H. C. (Curly) Byrd was coach. "Untz" played three seasons, before and after the World War, and each time was selected by the late Walter Camp as one of the 50 best halfbacks in the country.

Selected in 1922

He never made Camp's first All-America eleven, but he was selected, in 1922, on several newspaper All-Americas.

"One newspaper I remember picking me," recalls Brewer, "was the Philadelphia Record."

Brewer's football career at Maryland began in 1916, when as a freshman he starred for the varsity team, which was using frosh then. Before the 1917 season, Brewer enlisted in the United States Army, where he continued his gridiron success as player and coach.

He led the Tenth Regiment of Fort Jackson, Columbia, S. C., to the camp's football title in 1919. Next year he returned to Maryland and picked up where he left off and won recognition as the Terps' greatest halfback of the era.

Graduated with a B. S. in chemistry in 1922, Brewer turned his talents to professional football coaching and playing with Akron and Buffalo in a circuit that was the forerunner of the National Professional League.

Coached at G. W.

Brewer also coached at George Washington University for a year, serving as Bill Quigley's assistant in 1923. The same season he coached the Mercurys, a famed local sandlot eleven of that time, and it was durinig that season, too, that he executed his sensational 54-yard drop-kick.

The occasion was the afternoon that Mercury played its bitter rivals, the Mohawks. Brewer, who hadn't played a game in more than a season, dressed for the game, but intended to play only if a drop-kick was needed.

With the score tied, 6-6, and less than two minutes remaining of the first half, a Mercury drive bogged down at midfield and Brewer decided the time was ripe for a drop-kick attempt.

Although the ball was at an extreme angle and the field was wet, Brewer dropped back to his own 46 yard line and booted what eyewitnesses called a "perfect" three points.

The Post's Walter Haight, an eyewitness to the kick, said the ball cleared the posts with a force that carried it at least ten yards more.

A Super Athlete

At Western High and St. Albans Prep, Brewer is remembered as a super athlete. He is numbered among Western's greatest gridders, and while at St. Albans he established scholastic track records that still stand. At Byrd Stadium, Maryland, Brewer turned in times of 9.8 for the 100 and 21.6 for the 220, that have never been approached by schoolby sprinters. proached by schoolboy sprinters. in football for many years, Brewer does not believe that he would be outdated as a coach, pointing out that for 18 years, ending last season, he officiated at high school and college games. He is now employed as an advertising salesman by a local newspaper.

"UNTZ" BREWER

Terp Quintet Faces Season Of 22 Games

By the Associated Press

University of Maryland's basketball team, with only four returning veterans but sporting a bunch of promising talent from last winter's freshman squad described as the best rookie material in 10 years, opens a 22-game schedule December 13 against Richmond University at Richmond.

Coach Burton Shiple's Terrapins struggled through their worst hoop season in history in the 1940-41 campaign, dropping 20 straight games before "rallying" in the finale to score an upset over Washington College, 28-18.

But Shipley believes it will be different this year, especially with the return of Marle Du Val, a star forward of the 1939-40 club who did not take up basketball last season.

He has two other lettermen forwards, Irving Gordy from Cambridge High, and Leib McDonald, of Sparks High, and a letterman guard, Bob Fetters, from Baltimore Poly. All are tall and rangy, and their experience should aid the 11 rookies seeking varsity berths.

Shipley needs a good center to fit in with his veterans, and has an eye on Ernie Travis, a 195-pound, 6-foot-3-inch pivot man formerly with Roosevelt High, Silver Spring, Md.

Besides Travis, soph prospects include the giant Heckert Horn, a 220-pound guard scaling 6-foot-3 from Valley Forge Military Academy; Forward-Tommy Mont, of the varsity football squad, a 6-footer weighing 181, and another forward, Ball Hawking Don Schuerholz, former Southern, Baltimore ace.

There should be several able supporters from other squad members, including Kenneth Daniels, guard, Hagerstown, Md.; Eddie Baltz, forward, from Central High, Washington, and two football players, John Brenner, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., and Bob James, Harrisburg, Pa.

Opening against Richmond in a barnstorming tour last year, Maryland dropped a 36-48 decision, and the Virginians repeated in a return battle January 31, trimming the Terps, 38-17.

The schedule:

December 13—At Richmond U.; 18—William and Mary at Williamsburg; 19—West Virginia at Cumberland; 30—Seton Hall at South Orange, N. J.; 31—City College of New York at New York.

January 2—St. John's at Brooklyn; 8—Virginia, at Charlottesville; 9—Duke at Durham; 16—Washington College at home; 21—Georgetown at Washington; 24—George Washington at home; 31—Virginia at home.

February 3—V. M. I. at Lexington; 3—Washington and Lee at Lexington; 7—Washington and Lee at home; 11—Navy at Annapolis; 13—William and Mary at home; 14—West Virginia at home; 18—Army at West Point; 20—North Carolina at home; 23—Duke at home; 27—V. M. I. at home.

Eagles Face Pesky Gulls Here Tonight

Coach Burt Corbeau's aggressive Atlantic City Sea Gulls will be out to win their third consecutive Riverside Stadium inaugural tonight when they engage Redvers Mackenzie's Washington Eagles in an Eastern Hockey League game at 8:30 o'clock.

Two years ago the Gulls spoiled the Eagles' debut in organized hockey at Riverside by putting over a two-goal upset and last season outscored the locals in a ding-dong duel, 6 to 5.

Atlantic City, backed by a recent 7-to-1 rout of the Eagles on its home ice, nevertheless will be no better than an even choice tonight. The defending champions have scored 26 goals while sweeping their last three games and can achieve a .500 percentage with five victories as against as many defeats and one tie by winning tonight.

Atlantic City, however, has been a long-time nemesis of the Eagles. Two years ago the Gulls were the only Eastern League team to win a series from the second-place locals. Last season the Eagles' championship club could do no better than edge out the Corbeaumen by a single game.

The champions will be bolstered tonight by the debut of Ernie Mundey, veteran center and winger, who is scheduled to arrive here on The Montrealer at 12:55 o'clock this afternoon. Mackenzie yesterday hinted that Mundey will be introduced on a line comprised of the valuable Odie Hallowell and fast-improving Marty Madore.

Tommy McCormack, spirited and high-scoring center and winger who injured his right leg while crashing into the boards against Baltimore last week, yesterday requested that he be permitted to rejoin the team tonight, but his suggestion was vetoed. Tommy, however, definitely will be back on the ice against Baltimore Friday.

19 D. C. Men Made Naval Lieutenants

Promotion of 19 Washingtonians and 27 other men from nearby Maryland and Virginia to the rank of lieutenant in the Navy, was approved by President Roosevelt yesterday, the Navy Department announced.

The candidates, promoted from lieutenants (j.g.) were recommended to the President by the Navy's line selection board. They were included in a list of 316 men in the Nation recommended for promotion.

Also approved by the President was a report of the Naval Reserve line selection board, which recommended 60 lieutenants for promotion to lieutenant commander in the U. S. Naval Reserve. Included were three men from the District. They are Rhea Whitley, Charles N. Walker and Victor Hicks.

Washington Men Listed

New lieutenants in the Navy from Washington are John D. Stevens, Manning M. Kimmel, James W. Whaley, Alva W. Dinwiddie, Carter B. Jennings, John H. Theis, Earle G. Gardner, jr., Richard M. Ordnance Plant Builders Deny Waste Charges

By the Associated Press

Contractors building the 51 million dollar shell-loading plant at Milan, Tenn., yesterday denounced as "reckless charges" some statements made by witnesses before the Senate Defense Investigating committee and said they would meet "every gratuitous insinuation and innuendo" with proof of its "falseness."

The contractors, the Ferguson-Oman Construction Co., through their attorney, Will R. Manier, of Nashville, Tenn., stated they had "a complete answer" to every charge of "waste and extravagance" made by previous witnesses and did not want to be "cut off" in their testimony.

This statement was made after Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, presiding during the absence of Senator Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, suggested filing in the record a batch of affidavits which Manier said he preferred to read "to get them before the press."

"Hitler Helper" Testifies

Highlights of yesterday's session included frequent clashes between Manier and Hugh A. Fulton, counsel for the committee, and the reading of affidavits describing Leo Helzel, former chief timekeeper for the Quartermasters Division on the Milan Wolf Creek Ordnance Plant, as an "arrogant and overbearing" official who called himself "Hitler Helzel."

Helzel last week testified he found employes of the contractors' payroll office "standing around a stove doing nothing" when he appeared to take over his inspection duties.

Several of the affidavits said that Helzel introduced himself by saying:

"I'm just another Hitler—I'm Hitler Helzel."

Helzel, present in the committee room today, smilingly told the committee he did that in a light vein, adding that, "I'm of the Jewish faith." He said he also made the statement, facetiously, that "I'm the Jewish Hitler."

Manier also produced several affidavits by subordinates, associates and superiors of Philip Helzel, the time inspector's father, denying that the father was employed by the contractor to "kill flies" as the son testified last week.

The affidavits said that the elder Helzel was engaged in disinfecting drinking water barrels and rubber boots and at no time was engaged in killing flies.

"I never saw him kill a fly at all," said one affidavit by a Negro subordinate of Helzel named Ivory White.

An affidavit from W. A. Walsh, chief accountant for the construction company, was referred to by Manier as "documentary evidence convicting Helzel" of giving inaccurate testimony before the committee when he said the cards signed by the workers did not carry a criminal code provision giving the penalty for false representation.

Walsh said that such cards were in use before Helzel's arrival at the project last March 14 and presented a certified copy of a time card used by one worker on March 3.

Helzel's predecessor as chief timekeeper for the Government, J. T. McCarran, said in another affidavit that he transferred to the pay roll of the contractor with the full consent of his superiors and said that his wife was employed by the contractor as "Thelma Schultz" because that was her maiden name and the name on her social security card.

Senator Mead said he thought it was not an "ethical procedure" for employes of the Government to obtain jobs with contractors on projects where they are working.

Adm. Sexton Elected Head Of Carabaos

ADM. SEXTON

An 1897 graduate of the Naval Academy, Admiral Sexton holds the Navy Cross for services rendered during a varied naval career.

"He has rendered distinguished service in the Spanish-American War, Philippine Insurrection, Vera Cruz occupation and the World War," reported Col. Joseph M. Miller, reserve medical officer, who is secretary of the Carabao.

"He commanded the United States Battleship Fleet in 1933 and 1934 with the rank of vice admiral."

The Carabao order, composed of Army, Navy and Marine Corps officers who served in the Philippine Insurrection, reelected Gen. John J. Pershing, one of its founders, as a councilor in the field (member of the general staff).

Maj. Walter Karig, chief of the Newark Evening News' Washington bureau, was named an associate carabao in recognition of "distinguished service" as a member of a United States mission to the Philippines.

Another associate carabao elected was Capt. William F. Santelmann, leader of the United States Marine Band.

Secretary Heller's report that the chiefs of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard now all are Carabaos was received with acclamation.

Kalorama Area Wardens Hear Chief Murphy

"What would happen to Washington right now if bombs were dropped on us? Well, we would have no protection and no organization," said the District's chief air raid warden, Clement Murphy, last night at a meeting of the wardens of the Kalorama area at Central High School.

The fire battalion chief said "even if the bombing never comes, our work is a good pastime, and a good way to meet our neighbors.

After he had described the duties of wardens, Deputy Warden W. T. Kruglak announced that registrations were open for first aid classes. Many indicated their intention to join.

Answers to Quiz

1. The requirements for a defensive bid at the two-level when vulnerable are a strong five-card suit, six sure winners and at least two high-card tricks. North would do well to pass West's opening bid, although he holds three high-card tricks. He has only three winners and his only five-card suit is weak.

2. With a minimum opening bid it is best not to encourage partner to a slam effort by showing a new suit. North's best call is to mention again his hearts which justify rebidding.

Local Pro Cagers Take New Name

The signing of two outstanding players was announced by the Washington Bruins colored basketball team, at the same time that it was revealed the club had decided to change its name. From now on it will be the Washington Bears.

"Reds" Briscoe and William Wright were the new acquisitions, signed by Coach-Player "Tarzan" Cooper. First action of the season will be December 14 against the Brooklyn Dodgers at Turner's Arena. Games will be undergone each Sunday thereafter.

Mississippi State Too Busy for a Bowl

Kansas City, Dec. 1 (AP).—Coach Allyn McKeen, whose Mississippi State football team worked out on Rockhurst College field today to break a trip to the West Coast, said the squad was not expecting a New Year's Day bowl bid.

"Our late game with San Francisco (next Saturday) puts us out of the running for a bowl bid," he said. "We aren't expecting to be playing January 1."

140 Novices Enter Gloves Tourney Here

A bumper crop of 140 novices will weigh in at the District Boxing Commission's new offices, Third and Indiana Avenue Northwest, tomorrow night in preparation for the opening of the five-week Golden Gloves boxing tournament scheduled for Uline's Arena.

Novices open competition at Uline's Friday night at 8 o'clock, and the tourney will continue on December 12-19 and January 2-9.

Tomorrow night's weighing-in ceremonies are scheduled between 6:30 and 8:30 o'clock and pairings for Friday night's bouts will be made after the contestants are weighed and examined. Weighing in for seniors is scheduled for the Boxing Commission a week from tomorrow night.

Any coach would revel in the talent of the aforementioned starting line-up, but undoubtedly would be carried away in ecstasy in being able to call upon a second team almost the equal of the best.

The No. 2 assortment is comprised of John Rokisky, of Duquesne, and Malcolm Kutner, of Texas, at ends; Ernest Blanding, of Tulane, and Alf Bauman, of Northwestern, at tackles; Bernie Crimmins, of Notre Dame, and Ray Frankowski, of Washington, at guards; Darold Jenkins, of Missouri, at center; Bill Dudley, of Virginia; Frank Sinkwich, of Georgia; John Grigas, of Holy Cross, and Derace Moser, of Texas A. and M., as backs.

Frankie Albert, Stanford's left-handed, left-footed ace, was the only unanimous choice. His operation of the Indians' complicated T formation and the fact he is among the best ground gainers in the Nation apparently caught the eye of all. Albert also is the only player this time to secure a berth on the I. N. S. All-America two consecutive seasons.

Hodges' 442 Sets League Pin Record

Jack Hodges and his Golden Rule quintet ruled the Odd Fellows League last night at Brookland when the ace member of the squad posted games of 158, 134 and 150 to chalk up an all-time league record individual set of 442, three sticks better than Earl Steele's effort in November of last season. With Hodges' big slam the mainspring of a fierce attack, the Golden Rulers won handlily from Columbia No. 1 despite Charley Hatten's 152 and went on to further acclaim by winning team highs with a 614 game and 1806 set, the latter a season record by 63 pins. Ed Donaldson, jr., rolled 141 for Amity No. 2, the largest game the Donaldson youngster has had in his league play. The Covenant team, also inspired by Golden Rule's fine bowling, managed a three-game win over Eastern, erstwhile leaders.

ARCADIA

The Veterans' team in the Federal League at Arcadia found Monk Frasier's alleys to its liking for with Eske Winnike pacing his boys with a 417 set the quintet totaled a splendid 697 team game to post an all-time league record, and continued their fine pin banging to roll a set of 1967, also an all-time high. The Veterans, however, were denied a complete capture of all the glory for the night as Milton Walker, GPO, totaled 158 for high individual game to hold the Vets back, allowing them but an odd-game victory despite their tremendous totals.

PENN RECREATION

A 155 single by Edwards, of Survey, and a 403 set by Meredith, of Sub Station, topped the Kilowatt League at Penn Recreation with both teams taking highs, the first with a 624 game and the latter, after a pinfall of 1751 for set. Transit won three from District Engineers and the Meter boys went into the league lead by taking a sweep over Accounting.

SILVER SPRING

The Georgia Avenue League at Silver Spring found Al Masson the hero of the night with his 158 single and 429 set which not only helped Hiller Motors win two games from Corr's Sport Shop, but enabled them to tie Takoma Engineering for high team set with 1731. Corr's, despite the two-game loss to Hiller, rolled high team game of 614.

GEORGETOWN

When Al Gorham rolled a 131 single and 343 top set, Bob Meunier came through with high game of 137 and Carl Greimel tossed in a 120 effort their Catbirds team in the Brookmont League at Georgetown Recreation proceeded to post season team highs with a 602 game and 1623 set and win three from the Cardinals as well. Meanwhile R. Spittle was rolling 117-322 to lead his team to the odd tilt over the Orioles despite Deao's 132-320 for the latter, while Clarence Nair's 123 for the Eagles won the odd game from the Blue Jays.

CLARENDON

A. Myer, of Columbia Specialty with 175 and Frank Dore, of Caramel Crisp with 399 led the Commercial A League at Clarendon with the Miller Builders boys taking the team highs after team scores of 648-1788, which included three games from Veri-Best Weatherstrip. The Caramel Crisp team managed to take three in a row from Clarendon Fire Department.

Terrible Tom Gomez Knocks Out His Foe

Jacksonville, Fla., Dec. 1 (AP).—Terrible Tommy Gomez, the chunky slugger of the 116th Field Artillery at Camp Blanding, Fla., slammed out a one-round knockout tonight to stop Cowboy Greggs, of Houston, Tex. The end came 2 minutes and 20 seconds after the start of a ten-round fight.

Greggs became the fourth straight victim of Gomez's comeback from his defeat last summer by Buddy Scott.

Quezon Avows His Loyalty To Roosevelt

By H. Ford Wilkins
Copyright by New York Times

Manila, P. I., Dec. 1.—Alarmed over the unexpected effect of his recent address on the status of civilian defense, President Manuel Quezon has issued a statement intended to remove any doubt as to his loyalty to President Roosevelt and the Government of the United States. He reported that he had become indisposed suddenly, although it has not been determined whether or not the President of the Philippinies is seriously ill. It is understood that physicians have subjected him to a thorough examination.

Senor Quezon's statement follows:

"There can never be any question as to my absolute loyalty to President Roosevelt and the Government of the United States. My speech was a denunciation of the misrepresentation and misinformation that has been sent to American theorists, pacifists and civil liberties unions which gave the American public a very wrong impression of what we are trying to do here.

"President Roosevelt knows he can count on me and my government and people to the most bitter end."

The statement may have been motivated by local criticism and a suggestion that he was playing into the hands of the Japanese with an untimely statement about the unpreparedness of civilian defense, also repercussions from the United States indicating that his remarks had a bad effect on Philippine-American relations.

The general belief here remains that his real object was to embarrass the United States High Commissioner for the Philippines, Francis B. Sayre, who on several occasions has blocked Senor Quezon's attempts to obtain from the United States large sums of money

America First To Aid Foreign Policy's Foes

By the United Press

Chicago, Dec. 1.—The national committee of the America First Committee announced tonight that it will "go into the 1942 national elections" with support for candidates opposing the Administration's foreign policy. The announcement was made by Gen. Robert E. Wood, acting national chairman.

"The America First Committee, which has not yet sought to influence the election of any candidate for public office, now believes that in due time and in proper compliance with the law this policy must be changed," Gen Wood said.

The committee said such indorsement of candidates for Congress would be "in a spirit free of partisanship and without regard to the political affiliations of the candidates."

Wood said specifically that there would be no attempt to build a third political party.

The committee scored Wendell L. Willkie for his "attempt to purge Republican Senators and Representatives who dare to support the pledge in their own party platform against entering the war."

Duke Professor to Speak At Georgetown Forum

Dr. Herbert von Beckerath, professor of economics at Duke University, will speak on "The Western World in Transition" at the opening of the Georgetown Graduate forum tonight at 8 o'clock in Copley Lounge on the campus. The forum will be held on alternating Tuesday evenings through March 17. General theme is "The Reconstruction of the Western World." All sessions are open to the public.

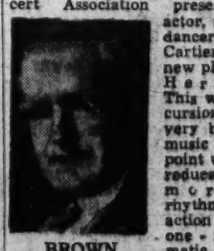
Jacques Cartier Appears Here In His Play for Actor-Dancer

Washington Concert Association presents Jacques Cartier in his play for an actor-dancer, "Proud Heritage," on Monday night in Wardman Park Theater.

At the opening of its second season last evening in Wardman Park Theater, the Washington Concert Association presented the actor, mime and dancer, Jacques Cartier, in his new play "Proud Heritage." This was an excursion to the very borderland of the music of the dance, for the point where it is reduced to little more than rhythm, for the point where the action of the one-man dramatic narrative called for drum beats, the rattle of seed-filled gourds, the clatter of horn anklets, and a few Hopi ritual chants. The interest of the performance was centered not upon music, but upon the versatility of the performer in his various characterizations.



BROWN

"Proud Heritage" tells the story of Pavi, a Hopi dancer, who is lured away from the reservation by the promoter, Sam Flint, for purposes of exploitation. Pavi is taken first to New York and then to Paris, where he is transformed into Mario de Castellar, the nephew of a Spanish hidalgo. Pavi's ambition is to become a white man, but the veneer of civilization cracks when the magic drums of his people summon him home, and he returns to assume his proud heritage as a chief.

Having seen only some of the tribal dances of the Hopi and none of their solo dances, I cannot pronounce upon the authenticity of Mr. Cartier's steps and gyrations. I commend his honesty in bringing out through his monologue that his most colorful costumes are not Hopi, but Comanche and Mexican. These dances were

Some Sidelights on Sprouting 'Golden Wings;' Old Timers Come Back to the Sound Tracks; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS AN INVIGORATING BUSINESS, this examination of new and untried plays for signs of substance and stability that may swing them to the side of public favor. Seldom more so than in the case of "Golden Wings," which closed its premiere week's engagement in the National Theater Saturday night and will not open in New York until next Saturday night.

JACK MULHALL

When an unknown inquirer, who had missed the review, called up for advice as to whether or not to pick up his reservations for the play, our suggestion was in the affirmative, with the proviso that he call up again afterwards and let us know how he liked it. So promptly came the note from Mr. A. E. Smith, George Washington University, saying this in part: "I found the play convincingly acted, but not gripping; it is sincere, yet lacking in the greater depth of human emotion. . . . It has a strong moral tendency and brings to mind 'Key Largo' and the quotation by Muni, 'Let me not to the marriage of the minds admit impediments, etc.'"

On the strength of last Monday night's performance, we can go along with Mr. Smith up to the point of "greater depth of human emotion." "Golden Wings" does not—or did not—essay any plumbing of the deeper emotions, nurtured by any thoughtful contemplation by the characters of the circumstances involved. It dealt with the impulsiveness and impetuosity of youth, crowded by events into an intensified life governed by hair-trigger and heedless decisions concerned primarily with shaping the seeming happiness of the moment. The whole point of the play seemed to me to be that the sturdier, fundamental emotions were the ones that came out on top in the end. Perhaps that will all be clarified by Saturday night's New York opening—on the strength of another letter.

This other correspondent who, perhaps, would prefer to remain nameless, has this, among other things, to say on the same topic: "I am sure from what I saw in Wilmington, after I last saw you, that the performance, and the production in general, was ragged, and even the script could have stood a deal of reworking. But it is also true that it had certain new and exciting things to say, which hard work could bring out. I feel that your review, more than anything else, decided those in charge to buckle down to the job—whereas praise might have decided them to coast in, and damning might have impelled them to abandon the venture. So I'm writing out of very real gratitude—and a very few minutes of leisure." All of which is a good deal of water over the dam, under the bridge, splashing the fuselage, or whatever, but it makes "Golden Wings" and next Saturday night just that much more interesting to watch.

Stars Again Visible in Firmament

There is great columnar agitation in Hollywood, from time to time, advocating the utilization of stellar talents which, for one reason or another, have gone into eclipse with the passing of the years. Sometimes somebody does something about it—as in the case of "Appointment for Love," for example. When this Charles Boyer-Margaret Sullavan costarrer opens Friday on the screen at the Earle, old-timers with photographic memories and eagle eyes will recognize such former favorites as Aileen Pringle, Maurice Costello, Charles Ray, Jack Mulhall and Grace Cunard. Was a time when their names were in the biggest lights shining from the marquees.

Those who wish to catch up on some of the better pictures they may have missed when first released, are face to face with opportunity. As its next feature, the Little Theater is bringing back "The Earl of Chicago," with Robert Montgomery and Edward Arnold, and all ready to take over the screen at the Pix are "The Mortal Storm," with Jimmy Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Robert Cummings, and "The Great Victor Herbert," with Allan Jones and Mary Martin, in the order named and beginning Wednesday and Saturday, respectively. So now you know.

Roar-of-the-Crowd Note

If you have a yell pent up inside somewhere that you'd like to get rid of, six girl cheer leaders and four boys from George Washington U. will be on the stage at Loew's Capitol Theater at the 9 o'clock show tonight to show you how. Blame Linda Darnell!

DRAMA DEPT.: A newcomer to Broadway applied for the understudy role in "Walk Into My Parlor." Luther Greene, the producer, questioned the youngster, who stated that he was from Waukegan, Ill., and had no previous theatrical experience, beyond two appearances in a high school play . . . "Have you return fare to Waukegan?" asked Green . . . "Yes," said the youngster . . . Greene listened to him read some lines from the play . . . "About that fare," concluded the producer. "Don't spend it."

'Student Prince' Triumphs Again at National

By Nelson B. Bell

"THE STUDENT PRINCE." The Messrs. Shubert present the operetta in prologue and four acts, with music by Sigmund Romberg and libretto by Dorothy Donnelly. Staged by Edward J. Scanlon; settings by Watson Barratt. At the National Theater.

—THE CAST—

First Lackey	Harold Brindel
Second Lackey	Herman Madigson
Third Lackey	Walter Peterson
Fourth Lackey	David Newman
Prime Minister von Mark	Alex Alexander
Dr. Engel	Lloyd Harris
Prince Karl Franz	Robert Davis
Ruder	Walter Johnson
Gretchen	Joanne Tree
Toni	Nathaniel Sack
Detlef	Robert Kennedy
Von Asterberg	Wilbert Liebling
Lucas	Richard Reeves
Kathie	Barbara Scully
Nicholas	Larry O'Dell
Lutz	Detmar Poppen
Hubert	William Kent
Grand Duchess Anastasia	Nina Varela
Princess Margaret	Jay Presson
Captain Tarnitz	William Castle
Rudolph	Jack Richards

Bearing lightly its 17 years of heavy service to a grateful public, "The Student Prince" returned to the stage of the National Theater last night to be welcomed with all of the enthusiasm, spontaneity and warmth usually accorded a "first time on any stage."

With book and lyrics shrewdly contrived by Dorothy Donnelly from a romantic drama sufficiently sturdy in its day to engage the talents of one of America's most distinguished actors, and fortified with one of Sigmund Romberg's most melodious and most memorable scores, this perpetual triumph of the Messrs. Shubert continues—and apparently always will—a richly tuneful, robust and roundly satisfying entertainment. If its comedy devices seem to some "dated," its settings a shade archaic and its mechanisms a little too obvious, it is only because the contours of legitimate operetta have been lost too long to public view in the streamlined magnificence of the cinema's expansive "musicals" and the stage's streamlined "revues." In its proper classification, "The Student Prince" is a model of melody, mirth and youthful heartbreak.

The cast that gave so rousing a performance of the work last evening is virtually the same as appeared here on the same stage no longer than six months ago. Barbara Scully continues to lend blonde beauty, excellent voice and vivacity to the role of Kathie, the little serving maid at the inn, who loved and lost a King; Detmar Poppen remains the pompous Lutz, valet to the prince whose romance was blocked by a throne, and William Kent is still the amusing Hubert, valet to the valet.

Nina Varela Comic Hit

Nina Varela has considerably enlarged the comic dimensions of the Grand Duchess Anastasin and last night achieved a conspicuous personal success that won the only exit applause of the entire prologue and four acts. It is a lamentable circumstance that only the reprises at the final curtain reveal the superb quality of her glorious voice. Joanne Tree, in the secondary feminine comedy role of Gretchen, also did much to expand a comparatively minor part into something of importance and Jay Presson made the Princess Margaret a graceful and engaging figure.

The title rôle on this visit is distinctly the gainer by having Robert Davis to sing and act it. Mr. Davis is a personable young man of agreeable and youthful presence and a vocal equipment commensurate with the demands of a part not easy to fill. The romance of the story is marred by no incongruity with Miss Scully and Mr. Davis appearing opposite each other.

It is, however, in the male ensembles that "The Student Prince" perhaps exerts its most electric musical effects. These are sung with lusty vigor by a large and fully competent chorus of Heidelberg students, led by Robert Kennedy, Wilbert Liebling and Richard Reeves, as Detlef, Von Asterberg and Lucas.

In the nonsinging roles of importance, Alex Alexander, Walter Johnson, Nathaniel Sack and Larry Odell render able support, with Lloyd Harris an effective Dr. Engel, the prince's tutor, and William Castle an adequate rival for the hand of the princess.

Although the settings and costumes are a trifle time-tested, the third-act royal palace at Karlsburg presents a scene of noble proportions and a magnificence that is only slightly tarnished. In an engrossing operetta that provides such gems of melody as "Golden Days," the "Drinking Song," "Deep in My Heart," "Serenade," "Student Life," "Farewell Dear" and the rest, settings are of decidedly minor consequence.

"The Student Prince" is still a "must" on any sagacious list.

D. C. Clearings Increase 24% In 11 Months

Washington bank clearings, continuing the sharp upturn in November, now show a 24 per cent increase for the first 11 months this year as compared with the same period last year.

The 11-month total reached the astronomical figure of $1,583,558,174, which compares with $1,247,489,329, according to cumulative totals on file at the Washington Clearing House Association.

November check transactions totaled $148,004,068, as compared with $132,125,590 in the same month last year. Every month this year has shown an increase as the following table indicates:

	1941	1940
January	$132,187,282	$107,137,093
February	118,871,597	93,153,189

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Dec. 1 (AP).—Led by soybeans, which soared 6 cents a bushel, the limit permitted in one day, grain prices registered gains of 1 to 2 cents in a general advance today.

Wet weather likely to interfere with late bean and corn harvesting, reduced receipts of these cereals at terminal markets, resumption of American-Japanese conversations and a Bureau of Agricultural Economics forecast that prices would continue to rise in 1942 were bullish factors.

N. A. M. Council Hears Views On Antistrike Legislation

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 1.—Industry's wishes in regard to antistrike legislation for defense lines were outlined today at the opening session of the National Industrial Council of the National Association of Manufacturers.

R. S. Smethurst, counsel for the N. A. M., told the council, attended by approximately 1000 representatives of trade associations, that bills introduced by Representative Howard Smith (Democrat), Virginia, and Senator Clyde Herring (Democrat), Iowa, came closest to meeting views of manufacturers.

Smethurst asserted that the National Defense Mediation Board had failed to solve the problem of defense strikes for two principal reasons:

"Absence of any clear policy on the closed shop.

"Absolute lack of any means of compelling unions to accept board recommendations, although the employer faces the taking over of plants if he fails to accept."

Walter B. Weisenburger, N. A. M. executive vice president, told the conferees that American industry was submitting gladly and patriotically to Government control for the integration of all-out defense efforts, but that it had even now to plan for the future for a well executed release from these controls.

He said industry's goal at this time was twofold: Complete cooperation in defense manufacture toward winning the war and, of almost equal importance, maintenance on a fair scale of civilian goods production.

W. W. Chamblin, director of N. A. M.'s Washington office, suggested businessmen should be more articulate in letting the Nation's lawmakers know their needs and desires.

"Congressmen," said Chamblin, "are not hearing from businessmen and are not receiving the business viewpoint.

"Industries which are under attack, individual businesses which are under attack, wonder why no one ever defends them upon the floors of either the House or Senate.

"Yet how many of those who ponder why they go undefended have seen to it that their friends in Congress have been supplied with the facts with which to defend them?"

Carl M. Lynge, of the Office of Production Management, told the panel of industrialists:

"The production program of United States defense manufacturers is well up to expectations—in some cases running ahead of schedule."

Lynge said he was unable to divulge exact figures but indicated the progress now being made was highly satisfactory.

"Man power," he said, "fortunately does not seem to be a headache, for, thus far, industry has done a magnificent job of training workers for defense operation, although there are some shortages of skilled labor."

Lynge left the discussion of materials to two associates, John H. Martin, assistant director of policy of OPM priorities division, and Dr. Reavis Cox, supervisor of industry branches of OPM civilian supply division.

Martin said: "Frankly there is not material to go around. We need more materials for the defense program than there is available—and it has got to come from somewhere."

Martin said that the Maritime Commission has found a dangerously low supply of ship plates, that, in fact, there is on hand less than a 30-day supply on the average in Maritime Commission yards and that 11 ways actually are idle at this time for lack of these steel plates.

Dr. Cox, discussing material shortages, said: "Inevitably we shall have to control supplies to a greater extent in the future.

"Obviously, if war comes in the Pacific, our present situation on receiving Far Eastern materials will change, and we must decide then what is to be done for substitutions on such vital necessities as rubber and tin."

Vom Rath Resigns 2 Posts, Retains 1 With Gen. Aniline

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Wilhelm vom Rath said today he had resigned as a director and as secretary of General Aniline & Film Corporation but would continue active as a vice president of the company. Vom Rath said the resignation was "entirely voluntary."

Frank A. Gibbons, assistant secretary of the corporation, was elected to succeed Vom Rath as secretary, the latter added.

The company's name has been involved in considerable discussion in some circle in connection with I. G. Chemie, a Swiss company which held a large block of its stock. Early in October the Treasury Department denied application of General Dyestuff Corporation to buy the stock, which was covered by an order freezing the assets of the Swiss concern.

Department of Justice spokesmen said that department was investigating whether or not there was any connection between General Aniline and the I. G. Farbenindustrie, A. G., known as the German dye trust.

Vom Rath, German-born but a naturalized American citizen, is the son of the late Walter vom Rath, at one time a high officer of I. G. Farbenindustrie.

Gen. Shoe Plans $2,500,000 Issue

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—W. M. Jarman, president of General Shoe Corporation, announced today the company planned to sell publicly, with Smith, Barney & Co. as the principal underwriters, $2,500,000 of 15-year 3¼ per cent sinking fund debentures.

Proceeds would be added to working capital to meet an anticipated increase in the volume of business, he said.

Jarman reported the company's net profit for the fiscal year ended October 31 was $1,064,154, which equals $1.63 a common share, compared with $752,317, or $1.14 a share in the preceding year.

He estimated sales in the 1941 year were 38 per cent higher than in the previous period, orders were at a rate about 24 per cent above the same period a year ago and unfilled orders were 64 per cent above those of 1940.

Junius Morgan Called by Navy

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—The banking firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., Inc., announced today that Junius S. Morgan, a director and vice president, had been granted a leave of absence without pay to respond to a call to duty in the United States Naval Reserve.

Morgan, who graduated from Harvard University a few years before the United States entered the first World War, is also a director of United States Steel Corporation and General Motors Corporation. He is a son of J. P. Morgan, chairman of the bank.

Wabash R. R. Auctioned for $31,030,950

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—Reorganization managers today purchased the 330 million dollar Wabash Railroad at auction for $31,030,950, subject to the approval of the United States District Court.

Judge Charles B. Davis, in the sale decree, set the minimum price at the figure bid by the managers.

Arthur K. Atkinson, of New York, secretary of the managers, and Tom K. Smith, one of the four managers, did the actual bidding, quoting minimum prices for each of the 10 parcels, into which the railroad was split for bidding purposes, and for the entire property.

The sale came exactly 10 years after the railroad entered Federal receivership. It was in line with a reorganization plan approved by Judge Davis last August, under which the Pennsylvania Railroad will be allowed to acquire a majority of the common stock.

Special Master John S. Leahy, who conducted the sale, will report the results to Judge Davis December 13. After a hearing the Judge will approve or disapprove the sale.

Upon court approval the new Wabash Railroad Co., as successor to the present Wabash Railway Co., would take over operation and new bonds and shares would be distributed as provided in the court-approved organization.

Much of the 143 million dollars in Wabash bonds have been deposited with organization managers in assent to the plan. Deposited bonds may be applied by managers to the purchase price.

The reorganization will wipe out stockholdings in the old company, reduce capitalization from $330,789,265 to $192,647,795 and cut the annual fixed interest charges from $7,391,362 to $2,558,418.

The Pennsylvania Road now owner of about 49 per cent of the present preferred and common stock issues proposes to buy new common shares at $12.75 each, provided at least half of th enew issue is made available.

Railroad Nets Soar Four-fold In Ten Months

By the Associated Press

Class one railroads had an estimated net income, after interest and rentals, of $408,625,472 in the first 10 months of 1941, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday. The corresponding figure for 1940 was $100,932,114.

Net railway operating income, before interest and rentals, of the Class one carriers in the 10 months of 1941 amounted to $846,824,141, which was an annual rate of return of 3.79 per cent on property investment, compared with $532,132,247, or 2.40 per cent in 1940 and $759,038,636, or 3.43 per cent in 1930.

Steel Rate Rise To 97.6% Seen

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Operating schedules in the Nation's steel mills will step up to 97.6 per cent of capacity this week from 95.9 per cent last week, the American Iron and Steel Institute said today.

Steel circles said the increase was due primarily to resumption of coal production last week after the one-week interruption caused by a dispute between owners of captive coal mines and labor.

A month ago production was at 98.2 per cent of capacity and a year ago 96.9 per cent.

Sugar Futures

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt's opposition to the Fulmer-O'Mahoney sugar bill brought nervous liquidation of world contract futures today, prices receding .015 of a cent a pound, except for the expiring December contract, which closed out .39 of a cent a pound higher. Sales were 4150 lots.

Domestic contracts were inactive, closing nominally unchanged to .15 of a cent a pound lower.

After the close the House passed the sugar control measure, 134 to 37, and sent it to the Senate. The measure would revise quotas and increase benefit payments.

New Auto Prices to Be Fixed at Present Levels

The prices of new automobiles will be fixed at approximately the present levels, defense officials said yesterday after a meeting of dealers.

The Office of Price Administrator offered two tentative formulas for fixing the prices and asked the dealers to indicate their preference. By an informal but overwhelming vote of 78 to 3, the dealers chose a plan under which they would have the option of using either formula—"whichever would be most advantageous to a dealer in a given locality."

Both wholesale and retail automobile prices will be stabilized at the conclusion of studies now being conducted by Cyrus McCormick, head of the automobile section, and other OPA officials.

A few dealers registered complaints at "singling out" the automobile business for price control while some other businesses went unchecked. The complaints were less frequent, however, after Claire Cargile, of Texarkana, Tex., president of the National Automobile Dealers Association, told the group: "I recognize the inevitability of a price order."

McCormick said the two formulas were merely "tentative and flexible" suggestions which might be altered later.

One, called by him the "freight mark-up" plan, provided for a retail price computed by adding the list or factory price, the Federal tax, freight charges plus 33 1-3 per cent, and service and handling charges arbitrarily fixed at 3 per cent of the list price.

The other formula established the price to the purchaser as the total of these items: List price, tax, actual freight charges and a handling charge fixed at 5 per cent of the list price and freight charges.

Dealers were quick to point out that the "freight mark-up" formula, with its 33 1-3 per cent profit on freight cost, gave the more distant dealer an advantage over the dealer close to Detroit. The alternate plan gave a slight edge to dealers located close to the auto manufacturing centers.

Steel Plates Placed Under Rationing Order

Priorities Director Donald M. Nelson placed steel plates under a virtual rationing order yesterday as the first step toward instituting a direct allocation system for steel to replace the priority system, as requested by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board November 1.

The order provides that after December 1 (yesterday) "no person shall produce, deliver or accept plates except in accordance with the orders of the director of priorities."

Nelson reported that defense and essential civilian orders all carrying military priority preference ratings exceeded production capacity November 1. Capacity of the industry is approximately 600,000 tons a month.

About 50 per cent of existing capacity is required to fill orders of the Army, Navy and Maritime Commission. The rest is required principally by railroads for car construction, and by the petroleum industry for pipe and tanks.

Under the allocation order producers are required to file with the iron and steel branch of the Office of Production Management by the 15th of each month a schedule of production and shipments for the following month and a statement of unfilled orders for the period. The priorities director then will issue to producers an allocation or order embodying any changes which he deems advisable in the production and delivery schedule.

Any plates produced in excess of the schedule must be disposed of at the direction of the priorities division.

Nelson said the purpose was to "insure a continuous flow of plates into defense channels and to provide an adequate check against hoarding and excessive inventories."

Soft Coal Output Off 2,760,000 Tons in Week

Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department announced yesterday that there was a decline of 2,760,000 tons in bituminous coal production during the week ending November 22 as compared to the preceding week.

Ickes said the decline was caused largely by the suspension of operations in captive and many commercial mines due to a strike but also noted the Thanksgiving holiday.

Howard A. Gray, acting director of Solid Fuels Coordination, reported a ⅞ per cent increase in coal held in consumers' storage bins on November 1, but added the rate of consumption increased 8.3 per cent in October over the preceding month so there was little change in the average number of days supply represented by the stocks. He said 61,462,000 tons in storage on November 1 represented an average of 43 days' supply while the 56,994,000 tons stock piles on October 1 was an average of 42 days' supply.

Small Bank Loans Restricted Further

Heretofore, regulations have applied only to installment loans under $1000 and have placed few obstacles on the use of the borrowed money. The new rules apply to loans under $1500 and surround loans with numerous restrictions.

They prohibit banks from making installment loans if the banks have reason to believe the borrower will use the money to make a down payment or to finance the entire purchase of any of the 24 items for which the board has restricted commercial installment credit.

This means, for instance, that no one can go to a bank and borrow the purchase price on installment terms of an automobile in order to avoid making the one-third cash down payment which would be required if the automobile were financed in the usual way.

Officials said that they did not know how this might affect total bank loans to individuals. However, a Commerce Department study made public yesterday showed that consumer debts to industrial banking companies declined $5,500,000 in the first two months after the old regulations became effective. New and renewal loans in October were 2.9 per cent less than in October of last year. Such loans had been rising steadily until the board's regulations went into effect September 1.

Morgan, Stanley & Co. Congratulated By Merrill for Partnership Decision

Charles E. Merrill, senior partner in Merrill, Lynch, E. A. Pierce, Fenner & Beane, recently congratulated Harold E. Stanley, of Morgan, Stanley & Co., on the latter's decision to become a partnership (and incidentally a direct competitor). Copy of Mr. Merrill's letter to Mr. Stanley follows:

Dear Mr. Stanley:

I have heard the news that you and your associates propose to dissolve the corporation and form the partnership of Morgan, Stanley & Co. and that you intend to apply for a membership on the New York Stock Exchange and do a general investment and securities business not only with your corporate connections, but also directly with the investing public.

We are sincerely delighted to learn of your intentions and hope to have the company and the competition of your firm. My associates join me in extending most sincere best wishes. I am sure your proposed action will result in real benefits to the investment business generally and to the individual investor.

We further welcome this action of yours because it will make a real contribution toward the common task of having the public become better acquainted with the existing high ethics and fine facilities which are today available in carrying on the financial services so vitally necessary to a sound democratic economy.

Sincerely yours,
CHARLES E. MERRILL.

"WHAT READERS THINK"
TODAY'S QUESTION: WHAT DO YOU THINK OF THE NEW CLOCKS WITHOUT HANDS?
MR. BLEEK SAYS: "I LIKE TO SLEEP LATE EVERY MORNING. BUT I WORRY ABOUT THE TIME. WITH THE NEW CLOCK, I NEVER KNOW WHAT TIME IT IS, SO I DON'T WORRY ANY MORE."
MRS. BILLINGS SAYS: "IF IT HADN'T BEEN FOR MY NEW CLOCK, I WOULD BE DEAD TODAY. I DIDN'T KNOW WHAT TIME IT WAS, AND I MISSED THE BUS WHICH NEARLY TURNED OVER YESTERDAY. IF I HAD BEEN IN IT, IT WOULD HAVE TURNED OVER, BECAUSE I ALWAYS SIT ON THAT SIDE."
HORACE GUMBLE SAYS: "IN CASE MY TEACHER READS THIS, I DON'T LIKE THE NEW CLOCKS. IF I HAD KNOWN WHAT TIME IT WAS YESTERDAY, I WOULDN'T HAVE MISSED SCHOOL AND I WOULDN'T HAVE HAD TO GO ICE-SKATING INSTEAD."
BELLA FURBISH SAYS: "I LIKE THE CLOCKS WITHOUT HANDS. PEOPLE USED TO SAY MY FACE WOULD STOP A CLOCK, BUT NOW THERE IS NO WAY OF PROVING IT."

Honors where honors are due are to be paid to Edward R. Murrow, chief of the Columbia Broadcasting System's staff of war correspondents, tonight.

An intimate little party, comprising a thousand-some-odd guests, is being thrown for him in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel in New York by William S. Paley, CBS's president. They'll include all sorts of important figures from Washington, the Nation's leading industrialists, radio's bigwigs and prominent representatives of the newspaper and magazine worlds.

But the general public will be in on the thing, too. For the affair will be broadcast from 9:30 to 10:30 p. m. and you, too, (over WJSV) will be able to hear Murrow's first uncensored report of war conditions in England since his return to this country last week.

Following Murrow's talk there will be an open forum in which people at the main banquet table will ask him any questions they choose. CBS's distinguished news analyst, Elmer Davis, will preside.

Other highlights of the hour's broadcast will be an address by Archibald MacLeish, Librarian of Congress, and a musical and dramatic program paying tribute to freedom of speech. This will include a special adaptation from "The People, Yes," by Carl Sandburg and Earl Robinson, with Leonard Warren of the Metropolitan, as soloist, and with an orchestra and chorus directed by Lyn Murray.

Redcaps Being Driven to Meet Quota, 3 Tell Investigators

Three veteran Union Station redcaps yesterday told Wage-Hour Division investigators that they were "being driven" to speed up their operations since their work was stabilized by the establishment of a minimum wage of 36 cents an hour under the wage-hour law.

The three porters, each of whom had a record of more than 18 years' service, testified before Thomas Holland, director of the Division of Research and Statistics of the Wage-Hour Division. Holland is holding a series of hearings on operation of the flat 10-cents-a-bag rate at railways in the Southeast.

Shrewsbury Barber, 1640½ New Jersey Avenue Northwest, redcap for 18 years, said he was laid off for two weeks recently when he failed to turn in enough baggage checks to cover his pay.

William Brown, 852 Fifth Street Northwest, a redcap since 1920 who drives a taxicab on the side to increase his earnings, declared that the new system was working better, because he is "sure of $2.88 a day," plus some extra tips. However, he stated that the check-stub system now in effect frequently annoyed travelers who disliked the extra time it consumed. Redcap supervisors continually drove them to sell more checks, he said.

Jonas E. Mitchell, 602 Forty-ninth Street Northeast, an official of a redcaps union and an employe of Union Station for 33 years, stated that he now earns 25 to 50 cents over the minimum $2.88 wage, compared with total earnings of $1.50 to $2 a day under the straight tip system. He stated that he was "depressed" about the pressure under which he was compelled to work to earn his quota.

Hearings will be resumed today when company representatives will present their case to the division.

Hawaii's Only Woman Judge Gets Pointers on Civilian Defense on Visit Here

Gathering clouds of war over the Pacific have admittedly alarmed a trim, dark-haired career woman from the Island of Kauai, Territory of Hawaii.

She is the only feminine jurist in the Hawaiian Islands and for seven years has presided over the Fifth Circuit Court. Her name, she rather reluctantly told reporters, is Judge Carrick H. Buck and she definitely "is on vacation."

But she took time out yesterday for a "purely personal" visit to Col. Lemuel Bolles, local civilian defense director, in his District Building offices.

After nearly an hour's conference, Judge Buck departed with an armful of data on the District's civilian protection setup, explaining she thought it "would be of interest" to authorities on her island, the southernmost of the Hawaiian group, with a population of 36,000.

Although her fellow citizens—Chinese, Japanese, Filipinos, and a mingling of whites—are "most enthusiastic" about civilian defense plans, she felt the current Pacific trouble prompted "greater need for organization."

Judge Buck was born in New Mexico and was educated in California. For 18 years prior to her appointment to a Federal judgeship she spent 18 years in the "Islands" practicing law.

Before she leaves for home, Judge Buck said she intended to confer with Mrs. Roosevelt who, among other things, is deputy director of the Office of Civilian Defense in charge of voluntary participation.
